LAWRENCE PLANS TO MEET THREAT OF NEW STRIKE

FIND DAN RUSSELL'S OLD "STAMMERING" TEACHER

FOSS MEN GLAD IT'S WALKER

Complete returns for Governor:

DEMOCRATIC.

Foss	63,730
Pelletier	36,436
Foss' majority	27,294

REPUBLICAN.

Walker	54,159
Benton	43,297
Walker's majority	10,862

The few Democratic leaders and near-leaders who put in an appearance early today said that the real leaders of the Bay State Democracy are not only overjoyed by the great victory of Governor Foss, but almost equally delighted by the designation of Speaker Walker as his Republican opponent.

According to these Democrats the nomination of the Speaker is likely to spur the Progressives of Massachusetts—meaning the Progressive Party—to do their best for Charles S. Bird of Walpole.

It was said that Walker will be particularly unpalatable to Progressive Party men because they look upon him in politics, as neither fish nor fowl nor good red herring. His record, as it is viewed by Progressive Party men, shows that he has several times been on the edge of being a wonderful Progressive, only to turn up in a day or two in the camp of the Old Liners.

Nothing to Attract.

There is absolutely nothing in Walker's record, these Democrats said—and they confined themselves to Walker the public man, everybody testifying to the Speaker's estimable personal qualities—to attract a single Democratic vote.

The bulk of the Democratic vote is in the thirty-three cities of the Commonwealth, naturally, and in these cities the Democratic leaders would rather have Walker than Benton as an adversary. Colonel Benton is known from one end of the Commonwealth to the other as a good fellow and a "mixer." He comes from Vermont, as Governor Foss does, and the fear was that he might have brought along with him some of the fighting and other popular gifts of Eugene N. Foss.

Most of the men who were featured in yesterday's big battle went to bed long after midnight today with orders that they must not be disturbed. Early in the day the clerks, typewriters and attendants at the Benton and the Pelletier quarters began to get ready for the moving van. At the same time there were indications that Foss campaign headquarters, at No. 73 Beacon street, and Walker campaign headquarters in the Tremont Building, would be permanent establishments, at least until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Nothing to Be Ashamed of.

Both the friends and the opponents of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, Democrat, and Everett C. Benton, Republican, agreed that neither has anything to be ashamed of in the State-wide returns.

Mr. Pelletier polled 36,436 votes in his first campaign before a larger electorate than that of Suffolk County. He lost by 27,294, to be sure, but he was campaigning against a Democratic Governor who not only was the best known of New England Democrats but in whose executive record there was no flaw. The Governor's vote was 63,730.

Colonel Benton, even less well known to the public than the District Attorney, rolled up 43,297 votes against a Republican Speaker of the House who had been universally looked upon for some time as "in

ALICE NIELSEN, THE PRIMA DONNA

Miss Nielsen says:

"It seems to me it is now high time we heard at least part of our operas in English. Our national pride, if nothing else, should make us anxious to encourage the new movement for the promotion of grand opera in our vernacular. I cannot understand why all our singers do not try to help that plan. They and the public could soon make it possible."

HOLD DEBATE IN THREE TONGUES

How international the fifth International Congress of Chambers of Commerce, now in convention at the Copley-Plaza Hotel really is was shown today when a three-cornered argument was conducted in three languages, with delegates cheering or objecting, as their opinions moved them.

The discussion was on the question of an arbitration court. M. Uthals Le Doux a compatriot of M. Louis Canon-Legrand the distinguished president of the congress, rose to a point of order, but failed to get recognized by the chair.

Immediately debates arose, beginning in French, changing to English and finally winding up in German.

M. Le Doux begged to know who was running the congress, the chair or the congress itself.

Upon this remark, several delegates made objection. M. Le Doux sat down. Afterwards he remarked that he was not done, but would return to the issue.

Alice Nielsen, the popular soprano; Dr. Christian, of the Harvard Medical Faculty; and various delegates to the International Congress of Commerce, reached Boston this morning on the Franconia, from Liverpool.

Dr. Christian has been traveling on the Continent with several younger "meds." He has also attended the medical convention in Dublin. Harvard was represented at that gathering by about fifty students. After investigating the great European schools of medicine, Dr. Christian has convinced himself that the new Boston headquarters of the Harvard faculty will, when completed, be the finest in the world.

When the Franconia was made fast in her East Boston dock, Alice Nielsen, in a dark blue tailor-made gown, trimmed with lace, and a black hat, with a white

HINT NEW LAWRENCE STRIKE

LAWRENCE, Sept. 25.—A persistent rumor that all I. W. W. mill operatives and sympathizers will go on strike Friday in the mills of this city because of the imprisonment and coming trial of Ettor and Giovannitti has caused precautions to be taken by the mill owners and police. The police department has arranged to have fifty extra men on duty in the mill district Friday morning.

Many feel, however, that there will be no general strike because of the trial which is to begin in Salem next Monday. It is argued that if a walk-out were planned, the I. W. W. leaders would not have obtained a permit for their big parade and outdoor demonstration on Sunday.

Cornelius F. Lynch, Commissioner of Public Safety, has granted the I. W. W. officials a permit to hold a big parade here next Sunday. Delegations are expected from Manchester, Haverhill, Lowell, New Bedford, Fall River, Springfield, Worcester, Salem, Quincy and Boston. There are to be bands and banners. The I. W. W. leaders say it will be the biggest labor demonstration this city ever has seen.

The route is to be through the principal streets of the city and thence to the Immaculate Conception Cemetery. There exercises will be held at the grave of Mrs. Anne Lo Piezo, the woman who was shot in one of the strike riots last Winter, and for complicity in whose death Ettor and Giovannitti, two of the I. W. W. strike leaders, stand accused.

Four-fifths of 2,015 Franconia Arrivals 'Deadlier Than Male'

Four-fifths of the 2,195 passengers arriving on the Cunard liner Franconia today were of the "more deadly than the male" species.

This was particularly true in the steerage. Out of 1,468 steerage passengers more than 1,100 were women or girls, especially girls. The usual steerage list is just the other way. Often the steerage is about 10 per cent. feminine and accommodations and steward staff are gauged accordingly.

The Franconia's steerage steward was staggered when he saw the unusual proportion of feminine passengers. The women's quarters were not large enough, so part of the men's was taken.

Another marked feature was the small proportion of newcomers or immigrants. Two-thirds of the steerage passengers were girls who have been in this country and had saved enough out of their wages to make a vacation trip to the Old Country.

QUINCY JEWELRY STORE IS ROBBED

The jewelry store of C. F. Pettengill, in City square, Quincy, was broken into between the hours of one and two A. M. today, and two dozen bracelets, several gold chains, an old revolver and a gold watch were stolen. Entrance was gained through a rear window. The thieves were apparently frightened away, as they left a pile of silverware in the middle of the floor.

Russell Doctor Is Found

Tested Dan for Stammering

Sure Dakotan Is Same Person

Prof. Grady Recalls Incident Long Ago; Had Tiff With Senator and Never Got Fee.

"Professor Grady," whom Dakota Dan Russell has testified examined him, as a boy for stammering, was found today by the AMERICAN.

Professor Grady remembers the visit of Senator Russell and his son distinctly. He has seen Dakota Dan and examined him since his return. And he is confident that the Dakotan is the real Daniel Blake Russell.

"Professor Grady" is Professor Thomas B. H. Grady, head of the School for Stammerers at No. 56 Bromfield street. For forty years he has taught stammerers how to speak plainly. He lives in Bradford, N. H., but up to a few months ago lived in Melrose.

Here is Professor Grady's own story of the visit of Senator Russell and his son, back in the eighties:

I read in the paper the other day where Dakota Dan declared he and his father had come to me for an examination.

That man, when he said that, told the truth. I have always distinctly remembered the incident because I was never paid for my examination, and Senator Russell and I were "on the outs" always after that as a result.

Senator Called at Home.

It was about 1882, I should think. I was living on Oakland street, in Melrose. One night the Senator came to my house.

He was a very dignified man—car-

Commissioner Rourke of the Public Works Department today requested permission from Mayor Fitzgerald and the City Council to sell the old ferryboat Revere. The boat no longer is fit for use. SAY SHE TRIED TO BRIBE JUDGE

On a charge of offering a promissory note for $50 to Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster with intent to bribe him to appoint her a court interpreter, Mrs. Catherine Garalsky, a mother of five children, of No. 656 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, was held in $3,000 by Judge Williams in the Roxbury District Court today for a hearing October 1. She pleaded not guilty. She furnished bail and was released.

The complaint was made by Lieutenant John V. Lee of the District Attorney's office. The date on the complaint is September 14.

Mrs. Garalsky, it is claimed, sent Chief Justice Bolster a letter informing him there was a vacancy for the position of interpreter in the municipal Court. Pemberton square, Boston, and that she was qualified to fill it. She enclosed the promissory note.

WOODS SHOOTING CASE CONTINUED

Albert H. Woods, the wealthy Brookline florist, who shot and killed Thomas Goldrop, a gardener, of No. 52 Concord avenue, Cambridge, September 18, when Goldrop was picking rare violets on the Woods estate, was in the Brookline court today on a continued hearing. The case again was postponed, this time till next Monday. Woods is out on $5,000 bail. An inquest is to be held in connection with the case.

M'NEELY INQUEST ORDERED

District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier has ordered an inquest into the death of Major Frank A. McNeely of Albany, N. Y., who was found lifeless in a Boston hotel with gas filling the room.

Friends and relatives of Major McNeely in Albany declare that foul play, and not suicide, is at the bottom of the case. Despatches from Albany today said that the undertaker who prepared the body there for burial found a gash on the back of the head.

Dr. Magrath's Statement.

John F. Dever, clerk of committees of Boston City Council and a lifelong friend of Major McNeely, declared today that the Major never committed suicide, but was the victim of foul play.

Medical Examiner Magrath, who performed an autopsy on Major McNeely's body, said:

"There was no wound on the back of the head. There were a few superficial marks on the top of the head, very slight and not enough to have caused death.

"There was absolutely no indication of foul play. My report from the autopsy said that death was due to gas poisoning. I made a report to the District Attorney, who has ordered the customary inquest."

Major McNeely, who was Adjutant-General of the Third Brigade, New York National Guard, was one of the best-known military men in the Empire State.

He was found dead in a room in the Thorndike House, No. 76 Green street, West End, last Thursday morning.

The Major's watch and money were gone when the body was found.

Later investigation showed that the name "A. Nuts," under which Major McNeely was registered, was in another handwriting than his.

The Albany police have been informed that two men accompanied the Major to the Thorndike House and went upstairs to the room with him.

Theory of Knockout Drops.

From all these circumstances the theory is built up that the Major had been given knockout dope, that he was brought to the room, possibly struck on the head and, in any event, left for dead, with the gas turned on to cover up the crime under the cloak of suicide.

Inspector James D. Hennessy of Boston Police Headquarters began investigation of the case today.

The prominence of Major McNeely makes the mystery as to his death all the more notable. He was forty-three years old, unmarried and of a genial and cheerful disposition. Albany dispatches say he had no reason to kill himself.

Prominent Military Man.

He was secretary of the New York Armory Commission, had participated in all the mobilizations of the New York National Guard and was known as a skilful tactician and wise disciplinarian. He joined B Company, Tenth Battery, N. Y. N. G., at Albany, in 1898, and had risen through the non-commissioned and then commissioned grades to the rank of major and of adjutant-general of the Third Brigade.

He left Albany last week to visit friends in Boston, including Clerk Dever of the City Council committees. Mr. Dever, as it happened, was out of the city at the time.

The next known was the discovery of the Major's body in a room at the Thorndike House, on Green street, last Thursday at 10 A. M.

It was announced that the Major had registered at the hotel at 4 o'clock that morning as "A. Nuts." He was assigned to a room by Clerk Henry Welch. The morning papers also said that the clerk accompanied the Major to his room, lighted the gas for him and opened the windows. The Major was thirsty and drank covered glasses of water.

Several hours later smell of gas was detected. It was traced to the Major's room. He was found dead on the bed, presumably a suicide by gas. He was identified by letters and an Elks' card.

DAKOTA DAN DESCRIBES OLD HOME

"I'm Not as Smart as Mr. Nason, but I mean to Tell the Truth," Says Claimant.

rried himself finely—had a fine manner. He said he wanted to talk to me about his son, who was a stammerer.

I'm a little rough in my manner sometimes. Maybe I made him mad. Anyhow I told him flatly that I did no business at my home and that he must come to my office.

"Very well," he said. "I'll bring the boy in to you at your office."

Well, he did it. The boy was a dull chap. He was a sluggard, slow and stupid. But as soon as I put my hand on his throat—for I am deaf, and so, instead of listening to my patients, I feel the vibrations of their throat as they talk—I saw the reason for his hesitating, diffident manner.

He had what we call a stoppage. There are many kinds of stammering, and that is one. I examined him thoroughly, and asked some questions. Then I said:

"I can cure the boy. But it will be a long business and require constant training and attention."

"How much will your fee be?" he asked.

Now my fees run anywhere from $50 to $500. I told him so.

Had a Spat Over Fee.

He began to talk about our being neighbors and about the right way of doing business, and so forth. I wanted to be accommodating, so I said: "I'll do it and cure your son for $100. But it will be a big job."

Well, he laughed right out loud. He was contemptuous and got up and started for the door. Then he stopped and said: "I'll give you $50."

I said: Go on out. Keep your dollars, and let your son keep his stammering through life."

He snorted and opened the door. I said: "Wait a minute. My fee for an examination is $10. Of course if you have the treatment this fee is part of the whole charge. But if you don't I charge $10 for the examination."

The boy was looking on and listening all the time. His father, the Senator, said: "Oh, all right," and went out, and Dan Russell followed him.

After that I saw the boy occasionally, and I used often to ride in town on the same train with him. But he never spoke—just would sit, stooped over in the seat, twiddling his thumbs or looking out of the window. I was always ready to smile and say "Good day," but he never gave me a chance. That is why I have always remembered the incident.

Since this will trial started I saw Dakota Dan. It was at a hotel. He didn't know who I was and I didn't tell him. But I got a good look at him and heard him talk and it is the same man, I feel sure.

I have always had a grudge against the Russells. I owe them nothing. Instead I would like to get my fee and the interest on it. I don't want to go to court in this case, but if they summons me I will go. For I always have believed in justice, and I think the man is right in his claim.

CLEMENT L. POLLOCK'S DETAILED STORY OF REMARKABLE CONTEST

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

Dakota Dan again took the stand today in his fight to show he is Daniel Blake Russell and heir to half of the half-million dollar estate left by the late Daniel Russell of Melrose. The trial is before Master Pevey in the East Cambridge Court.

Mr. Nason, representing the Russell estate, began a test of Dakota Dan's memory as to the interior of the old Melrose home. The ranchman had drawn a diagram of the interior of the house. Whether this is accurate has not yet been disclosed. Mr. Nason sounded the witness to the farthest depth as to the interior of the house. He took it room by room and article by article. He went into the location of articles and the size and color of them.

Dakotan Gets Huffed.

Dakota Dan apparently remembered as much of the interior of his home as any ordinary person would who had not seen it for twenty-seven years. Many little details he did not recall, but the fundamental things he seemed to remember. He talked spontaneously about things in the house, recalling little incidental things that I should think he could not be couched about.

One trouble with Dakota Dan is that he gets angry when Mr. Nason tries to pin him down to some detail that he cannot remember. Dakota Dan regrets that Mr. Nason is a lawyer trying to show that he is an impostor and that it is his business to show that the witness cannot remember as many things as possible in the house in which he lived for twenty-three years.

Thomas Proctor, who was one of the trial lawyers in the last trial, and Herbert Parker, former Attorney-General, walked into the court while Mr. Nason was engaged in trying to nail Dakota Dan down to the minute details of the Melrose interior. They listened intently for a few minutes and left.

"Describe the top of the stove," said Mr. Nason.

"I don't remember about the top of the stove," replied Dakota Dan.

"How was the smoke carried out, by a funnel?"

"What do you mean by a funnel?"

The Old Kitchen Stove.

Mr. Nason described a stove-pipe. The Dakotan said he did not remember about the pipe.

"Wasn't there a curious top to the stove?"

"I don't remember."

"Wasn't there an overhanging top to the stove?"

"Well, it would not be curious if there was."

"Where were the ovens in the stove?"

"I don't remember."

"Well, you were in the kitchen a good deal, weren't you?"

"Yes, but not in the stove."

"Did you ever look in the stove?"

"No."

Mr. Nason then went to the furnace in the cellar.

"Did you ever put coal in the furnace?"

"No," replied the witness, rather looked after the furnace, and he did not allow us to interfere with it."

Puts It Up to Plumber.

Mr. Nason asked about the pipes to the furnace.

"You'll have to ask a plumber about that; I don't know anything about the pipes," said Dan.

Mr. Nason switched off to the kitchen.

"Did you say anything yesterday about a mirror being on the kitchen wall?"

"No."

"Yes."

"Have you thought it over since?"

"No, I had a headache last night."

"Did you see any chimney in the kitchen?"

"No, I don't remember seeing any brick there."

"Make a sketch of the back hall."

"There wasn't any back hall," said Dakota Dan. "I don't remember anything called the back hall. That is a new one on me. There was a back hall on the second floor in the rear of mother's room."

Dakota Dan said there was an entry to the kitchen, but he never heard it called "a back hall" or a "back anything." He made a drawing of this back entry.

"Now, what was there in the back entry?" asked Mason.

"There was a mat."

"Please indicate the mat."

"Do you want the old mat or the new one?"

"Were there two?"

"Yes."

"Were they in the same place?"

"Yes."

The Kitchen Entry Way.

"Sometimes," said Dakota Dan. "There was a broom in the entry-way. Sometimes clothes were hung on a hook in the entry-way."

"What else was there?"

"There was stuff there at different times."

"What kind of stuff."

"Stuff that they used—like potatoes. I can't give you all the stuff they had there at different times."

Mr. Scharton was not at the hearing during the forenoon session, being detained by a legal case at Jamaica Plain. Mr. McNally, his assistant, looked after the interests of Dakota Dan. As a matter of fact, neither Mr. Scharton nor Mr. McNally made many objections to Mr. Nason's inquiries, except once in a while to indicate that he makes them very tired by the way he bores into details.

Dakota Dan's voice at times is like thunder. It rolls ominously through the room. Then again it mellows until it is like the murmur of a hive of bees. It is then soft, tender and pathetic. It was in that voice that he said today:

"I mean to be honest. I'm not so smart as Mr. Nason and I'm not up to the tricks of a clever lawyer, but I mean to be honest and tell what I can."

This had reference to a door from the back entry of the house that opened into the kitchen.

"Was there anything odd about the overhead of the back entry door?"

"I don't remember.

"Don't you remember that it was arched?"

"No."

"Don't you remember that the sides did not run straight out? How far was the stair door from the kitchen door?"

"I never measured it. I don't know how long the kitchen is."

The Silent William.

William C. Russell sat at his counsel's table. Most of the time he rested his eyes on a typewritten transcript of evidence which he appeared to be reading. He paid no attention to Dakota Dan's testimony. Fresno Dan was not at the forenoon session.

I have wondered if William C. Russell—gray, silent, huddled in his chair, never saying anything to anybody—utilizes any of his time in court in computing just how much this fight is costing him. At a rough estimate, it must cost at least $1,000 a week. Mr. Nason is a high-priced lawyer. It is probable that he does not receive less than $100 a day for trying this case. He is worth it if any lawyer is worth $100 a day. At that rate Dakota Dan's description of the back hall of the house has so far cost about $50. That is a lot more than he could get for the production, illustrated by himself.

It is little wonder that Fresno Dan, accepted as the real heir, and thereby entitled to property worth $250,000, goes home with disgust on his face and tongue. He sees a lawyer drawing down $500 a week or $2,000 a month. Hard-earned money, while the best he can get is $10, barely enough for carfares, an occasional glass of beer and a few moving pictures shows.

If Fresno Dan is the real heir, it is my opinion that he is not getting enough pay, and if he isn't the real heir, I'm sure he isn't.

Two million dollars was paid the Boston & Albany Railroad Company by the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad under the provisions of the lease to the Central during the past year, according to the report of the directors made at the annual meeting today. This amount, in addition to the dividend declared by the New York Central 3½ per cent bonds, was paid out in dividends to the stockholders, making the total dividend for the year 8% per cent. With the exception of the succession of Livingston Davis to the place of his father, the personnel of the board of directors is unchanged.

HOTEL EMPLOYES ASK AID OF FOSS

Attorney Thomas C. Connolly and Edward Blechlinger, representing the striking hotel employes, called on Governor Foss today. They asked the Governor not to establish campaign headquarters in any Boston hotel that was not fair to its employes. Governor Foss replied that he was not thinking at present of opening any campaign headquarters in any hotel, but that if he did decide later he would keep the request in mind. The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration will receive a committee of the hotel strikers tomorrow.

line" for the gubernatorial nomination of his party.† The Speaker's total vote was 54,159. His majority 10,862.

Many splendid things were said around town today about the promptness with which Mr. Pelletier came through with a letter of congratulation to Governor Foss and a pledge of his hearty support for the ticket. Some politicians see in this promptness and whole-heartedness an indication that the District Attorney, one of these days, may "try again."

See Victory for Walsh.

In every quarter there seems to be a belief that David I. Walsh of Clinton, who last year came within 4,151 votes of the prize, will this year be elected Lieutenant-Governor.

Mr. Walsh's "regular" Republican opponent will be Lieutenant-Governor Robert Luce. Mr. Luce was unopposed yesterday. The name of former Governor's Councillor Edward F. Barry was on the Democratic primary ballot along with that of Mr. Walsh, but Mr. Barry had made no campaign beyond the erection of this lightning rod.

It seems to be the impression in political circles that Lieutenant-Governor Luce is even weaker than he was last year. His attitude at the State House during the "Elevated" strike is held to have contributed to this greater weakness.

There was much joy today down at Bull Moose headquarters in Devonshire street, where everybody said that the fact that less than 50 per cent. of the Republican strength came out yesterday, even with the attraction of the Bonton-Walker fight, was a gentle hint of the strength of Colonel Roosevelt's cause in Massachusetts.

Asked to Stay Home.

Roosevelt Progressives had been begged and implored, admonished and commanded not to turn out at the Republican primaries. In Devonshire street the Mast Hole leaders hold that this admonition was respected and, that the Roosevelt party has taken away more than half of the Republican vote of Massachusetts.

Over at the county jail today, Sheriff John Quinn has been shaking hands with both hands. With his right hand he has received the congratulations of fellow-Republicans, with his left—never the wiser—the best wishes of fellow-Democrats.

"Honest John" is the only man in the State who yesterday bit a bull's eye on both targets. He won the Democratic and the Republican nominations for sheriff. In the Democratic event he walked away from Matthew Cummings, once the national president of the A. O. H. Over on the Republican side, the sheriff showed his heels to Jeremiah J. Desmond.

The sheriff's Democratic majority was 20,548; his Republican majority 1,100. He beat Cummings 23,630 to 7,102. He triumphed over Desmond 3,264 to 2,158.

The Fights for the Senate.

When the big things were cut of the way, today, those Boston people who follow politics as closely as some others follow baseball turned their attention to the battlegrounds of the red-hot local fights for a State Senate nominations.

These were mostly Democratic. Senators Powers of South Boston, Timilty of Roxbury, Joyce of the South End, Horgan of Dorchester and Dr. Grainger of Winthrop all had to face other strong men.

Only "Jimmy" Powers of South Boston, however, motion picture magnate and friend of the "kiddies," was sacrificed. Powers took 13,000 children off to the beaches and the parks last Summer and had a glorious time.

While he was busy, Representative William P. Hickey was taking to the adult male population of the district. When they counted the votes, last night, Hickey had been nominated for the Senate by a majority of 856. The nomination is equivalent to an election.

Senator "Jim" Timilty, wealthy Roxbury contractor, was probably saved by a thread that he had three opponents instead of one. Representative "Jim" McInerney came within 407 of the Timilty vote, the figures being 2824 to 2417. The two other contestants had 993 votes between them, however, and last night Timilty was glad they had come in.

A closer contest was that raged in the South End and on the edge of Roxbury, where former Representative Timothy F. Callahan was pitted against Senator Thomas M. Joyce. Joyce polled 2,570 votes; Callahan 2,614. Callahan's friends say there will have to be a recount, the margin being but fifty-six votes.

Out in the Eighth Suffolk Senatorial District, Dorchester, where there were six entrants, the Democratic nomination was carried off by Redmond S. Fitzgerald, with a vote of 1,132. James T. Keaney came the nearest to Fitzgerald with 928 votes, the Fitzgerald lead being 254. But Mr. Fitzgerald is not a majority candidate. His five opponents, among them, rolled up 3,487 votes. A somewhat similar situation last year is said to have contributed to the loss of this district to the Republicans.

In the other Dorchester Senatorial District, the Ninth Suffolk, Representative William M. McMorrow failed to make as good a showing against Senator Frank Horgan as McMorrow's friends had counted upon Senator Horgan's vote was 2,506, Representative McMorrow's 1,421; Horgan's majority 1,085. In his younger days, Senor Horgan lived in Ward 8. He seemed to have mastered the Ward 8 habit of going there.

In the East Boston-Winthrop District, Senat Edward J. Grainger managed to squeeze in. His lead over Joseph E. Cahill was only fifty, the tally being 731 for Greine and 681 for Cahill.

Oth Senate fights that Boston talked about today were the victory of Senator Frank Quigley of Holyoke over Representative "Tom" Devine of that city; the triumph of Roger Wolcott, Republican, over two Republican opponents in the First Norfolk; the success of Senator Dennis E. Hathey of Lawrence in the Democratic primaries up there, where one of his rivals was J. P. S. Mahoney; the defeat of "Sam" Porter of Amesbury by Henry Wells of Haverhill, in the Fourth Essex, and in the Taunton district the nomination of William A. Bellamy over Ralph Davol in the Republican primaries.

Rats in Harvard Dormitories Easily Digest Greek Roots

Rats which have invaded the senior dormitories in the college yard at Harvard show a decided preference for Greek roots. Particularly in Hollis Hall, one of the oldest of the dormitories, the pests have been unusually numerous, and have called forth a protest from the students.

Not content with attacking all the edibles in the rooms and adjoining closets, the rats have twice endangered the safety of the building by gnawing at boxes of matches.

Professor Taussig's Principles of Economics are usually considered knotty propositions to the freshmen, but the rodents seemed to have no difficulty in digesting even this highly technical vocabulary.

At the head of the protesting students is Grover C. Loud, tenant of room No. 2 in Hollis Hall. He said today:

"We propose to see that some action is immediately taken by the faculty, if we have to petition the corporation to secure a hearing. It is bad enough to have to sling what little food we bring into the rooms in a tin can lined by a wire to the ceiling, but we could stand even that. But when the rats, by chewing up our college notes, force us to go to the professional tutors for notes in courses, the expense gets to be so great that we can't afford it.'

"My textbook, 'Greek Moods and Tenses,' although I never was able to get through it, seems to have furnished merely good eating to these pirates."

Loud led the way to a bookcase.

"There," he said, "are about $20 worth of books in that now. Last June, they were worth $100. These rats have mathematical minds. Do you notice that? That's a textbook on trigonometry—that is to say, it was once. Now you can use it for confetti. It's not even good enough to throw at the rat; he would sit up and grin."

Hollis Hall is 147 years old, and is built above the foundations of the original Harvard buildings which were started in 1630. The ground underneath contains almost whole rooms which have become buried in the lapse of three centuries, and there are passages running from these to the banks of sedge surrounding the Charles. It is believed by members of the Zoology department that the making of the Charles basin fresh water drove a large number of these great wharfrats out of their retreat into these passages; and that the further disturbance of the foundations by the excavations attending the new Cambridge subway forced them up and starved them out into the College buildings.

The Zoological department estimates that more than 3,000 generations of rats have been permitted to flourish in these foundations. The students in Hollis Hall are now preparing to make wholesale war on the 3,000th generation.

Women Push Search for John M. Keenan, Lost Charlestown Boy

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., Sept. 25.—The women of Bretton Woods and the other towns about Mount Washington joined today in such a protest against the abandonment of the hunt for John M. Keenan of Charlestown, Mass., that guides set out at daybreak to continue the search.

The boy was lost last Thursday, when fog shut down on the surveying party of which he was a member, and shut him off from his companions. He has been missing almost a week, and succumbed to rigorous mountain weather.

Nevertheless the women yet cling to a hope that he is alive, and insisted the search be continued.

Yesterday's search, without result, included raking the bottom of Tuckerman's ravine and dragging Milliken's Pond, on the Mountain slope.

Mrs. W. F. Draper and Statue of Husband She Gave Milford

MILFORD, Sept. 25.—A bronze equestrian statue of General William F. Draper, soldier, statesman, diplomat and author, erected at a cost of about $75,000 by his widow, Mrs. Susan Preston Draper, was presented to the town of Milford today by Mrs. Draper.

The ceremonies took place about the statue in Congregational Park.

Mrs. Draper herself did not speak. Wendell Williams made the presentation speech in her behalf, and Miss Margaret Preston Draper, her daughter, unveiled the statue.

Samuel McCall, the Congressman, made the principal speech of the day. James H. Reynolds accepted the statue on behalf of the town.

The statue of General Draper was erected on a small park purchased by Mrs. Draper from the Congregational Church. It stands in the very centre of the town, near the site of the new postoffice. It was designed by Daniel C. French, the New York sculptor, who superintended the work of putting it in place.

JORDAN'S LAST FAREWELL TOLD LOVE FOR WIFE

On his last day of life, only three hours before he walked calmly to the electric chair, Chester H. Jordan gave out a most remarkable farewell statement to the world, which was printed in the Christian Science Monitor.

He tells of his study of the Christian Science doctrines, how he found solace in these teachings as he neared his earthly doom as punishment for the murder of his wife, and expresses his deep penitence for his crime.

Jordan refers tenderly to the woman whom he slew and whose body he cut up and packed in a trunk that was found in a house on Hancock street. He says:

"In this, my last hour on earth, I wish to express my penitence for having been a channel of error and for wrongs to my fellow men, and especially to my wife, Mourera, for whom I am holding and have held only thoughts of love."

Other excerpts from his statement are as follows:

Views on Christian Science.

I feel it my duty to God, to man and to myself, to correct any false impression which may obtain from the manner in which I am bearing up under my present position and to state briefly my reasons for accepting Christian Science and what it has done for me.

As a child I had been brought up in the Presbyterian faith, and in later life had investigated to my satisfaction other creeds and doctrines. But they did not seem to satisfy, something seemed lacking, and finally I drifted into a condition of indifference, being unable to accept a God who would visit evil upon His children. On entering the jail at East Cambridge in 1906 I was given a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, and, though at first I read a number of its chapters, I was unable to grasp the import of its many truths and soon laid it aside.

"God is Love."

Two years or so later, during which time I had been unable to explain my case to myself or to understand why such a thing should be visited upon me, two or three Christian Science Sentinels were handed to me by a friend.

These I read carefully and experienced a desire to know more about Christian Science teachings. I again took up my "Science and Health," which meantime I had kept in my cell, and little by little during the year and a half since that time, thoughts and ideas which I had been unable to grasp on my former reading began to unfold in my consciousness. I soon began to realize that "God is Love" and of purer eyes than to behold evil."

My whole view of life and its purposes broadened and I recognized that my troubles had not been visited upon me by God—that error, evil and sin were impersonal and that man, as the image and likeness of God (as the expression of Spirit) is inseparable from divine principle—God—and therefore uninfluenced by the so-called laws of the flesh.

That I have gained a clearer and better understanding of God is evidenced in the fact that not only have I benefited spiritually, but morally, mentally and physically.

Had No Fear of Death.

In meeting what the courts have decreed for me this night, I want to state that I am fully aware of its significance, that I am not indifferent, nor am I a stoic. It is neither a false and temporary stimulus nor hypnotism or auto suggestion that is sustaining me, but simply that I realize the presence of the all-knowing mind, that I feel the sustaining influence of the infinite love and goodness of God, and that Christian Science has completely destroyed all fear of death in my consciousness.

God is my life, my all; whom shall I fear?

I shall have but passed on to a broader field of existence and to a fuller realization of the omnipotence and the infinite love and goodness of the all-knowing father-mother God.

I bear no ill will toward any man, but on the contrary, my last prayer is that they may see the truth which will make them free.

'Alienation Suit Due to My Plan to Aid Husband,' Says Wife

In the hope that she may help her husband and win back his affection, Mrs. Alfred E. Benson of Danvers today declared that she would tell all about her acquaintance with Fred J. Derry, the wealthy Danvers box manufacturer, against whom her husband, formerly a $12-a-week driver for Derry, has brought suit for $5,000, alleg-declares life is almost unbearable. She says she wishes she could take the children and go away, as her husband hardly speaks to her now.

It is Mrs. Benson's beauty and graceful bearing that caused all the trouble, if the stories are true. Derry was seized with admiration for the young wife of his driver, it is declared, when he called to straighten out some trouble that the husband had with the foreman of the yard, Mr. Derry's own brother, Frank.

"He told me I was handsome and that he was surprised he had never seen me before," said Mrs. Benson. "I was big alienation of his wife's affections. "I will go on the witness stand and tell the whole story," she declared.

With her three small children, Mrs. Benson still lives with her husband in their little tenement at the Fort, No. 85 High street, down by the car barns, though she says to him," she went on. "My man was getting only eleven dollars a week then. I thought Mr. Derry would help us because he was rich, and he did raise my husband's pay. He raised it one dollar. My, but wasn't I angry with him, then.

"It was in September, 1911, when we first met. After he raised my husband's pay a dollar I did not feel so friendly. In November, when his box factory burned, Mr. Derry used that as an excuse to discharge my husband, although my little Beatrice was, we thought, dying of pneumonia. He got work for the other week, though.

"It was after this that my husband first heard stories some one circulated concerning us. Now he has filed suit."

Harvard Professor's Name Taken by Man Who Robbed Him

Professor Roscoe Pound of Belmont, Story Professor of Law at Harvard University, was pleased today to learn his valuable gold watch, stolen in Toronto, Canada, has been recovered in Philadelphia, though no mention is made of $450 also stolen.

The professor was not pleased, however, to hear the thief, when arrested, had taken the professor's name, which is famous here and abroad.

The chief's name is Robert Wilson. He crept into a room in the King Edward Hotel at Toronto on the night of September 1 last, and from the garments of a sleeping guest extracted a gold watch and $450, also some letters. The guest was Professor Pound, on a vacation. The professor's disgust at such a sordid piece of illegality may be imagined. He specializes in "quasi-contracts," "procedure in equity" and such advanced law matters. Common larceny is not in his course.

Lesson in Scientific Complexion Renewing

(From the Family Physician.)

Everyone has a beautiful skin underneath the one exposed to view. Bear that in mind and it will be easier to understand the correct principle in acquiring a lovely complexion. Nature is constantly shedding the top skin in flaky particles like dandruff, only much smaller in size. In abnormal conditions, or by advancing age, these particles are not shed as rapidly as in robust youth. The longer they remain the more soiled or faded they become—that's the immediate cause of a "bad complexion."

It has been discovered that ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, will absorb these worn-out particles. The absorption, while hastening Nature's work, goes so gradually enough to cause no inconvenience. In a week or two the transformation is complete. The fresh, healthy-hued, youthful underskin is then wholly in evidence. You who are not satisfied with your complexions should get an ounce of mercolized wax and try this treatment. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

WILSON HEADS FOR BOSTON

Governor Wilson of New Jersey, having performed his patriotic duty of voting at the primaries in his old Princeton home, today invaded New England for a three days' stumping tour, which includes a big Democratic ratification meeting in Tremont Temple in Boston Friday noon.

The original plan was for the presidential candidate to speak in Faneuil Hall, but the committee decided that the crowd would be altogether too great.

Today the Governor is due at Hartford at 1:15 p. m., and after a speech there he leaves for New Haven, arriving at 2:45. He will deliver an address in the Yale city in the evening, and will spend the night there.

Tomorrow Governor Wilson will leave New Haven at 10:40 for Springfield, and after a speech there will go in the afternoon to Barre to address the crowds at the Agricultural Fair. Then he goes to Fall River, speaking in the evening, and then heads for Boston at 9:30, arriving here at 11 o'clock. His will spend the night at the Copley-Plaza.

The doors of Tremont Temple will be opened at 11 o'clock on Friday. For half an hour the Ninth Regiment Band will render popular airs. Among the speakers invited to address the gathering, in addition to the presidential nominee, are Governor Foss, the Mayor, the Hon. Richard Olney and District Attorney Pelletier.

In New York yesterday, on his way to New England, the Governor waited at the Pennsylvania station for some time, hoping to be able to pay his respects to President Taft, believing that the Chief Executive's train from Washington would arrive before he had to leave, but the President's train was late.

JOHNSON IS OFF TO NEW HAVEN

Governor Hiram W. Johnson of California, the Progressive candidate for the Vice-Presidency, left Boston today for New Haven and Hartford, following his address at the Boston Arena last night, where he received a vociferous greeting from over 3,000 people.

Roosevelt's running mate pounded out the points of the third party principles with rapid fire oratory which brought the great audience to its feet continually with tumultuous cheers.

Above the din was heard the clanking of cowbells and the call of the Bull Moose.

"The bosses at Chicago assassinated the Republican party and their candidate," he shouted, "and the candidate of that moribund convention is a negligible factor in the contest now before the people of the land. After that disgrace, after that fraud, there was only one thing for men with red blood in their veins to do, and that was to form a new party."

Replies to Brandeis.

"Mr. Roosevelt's stand at Chicago was the most glorious thing in his whole career. Then we presented a propaganda in regard to humanity such as no party ever presented before, and now you can't stop us."

Governor Johnson replied to Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, who recently declared that the Progressive platform contained no plank recognizing the right of workers to organize. He said:

"I learn that one of your most estimable citizens, Louis D. Brandeis, has recently made the statement that the Progressive party is silent concerning the giving of labor the power to organize. This is not so, for John Mitchell himself wrote just that declaration in our party platform. I have the utmost regard for Mr. Brandeis and I look for the correction that should be made by any fair minded paper, and fair minded man."

Living Wages for Women.

The speaker created great enthusiasm when he said that the Progressive party demanded a minimum wage for women.

"By that," he said, "we mean that women shall receive a living wage." He quoted from statistics of Massachusetts to show the need of such and declared Wilson's argument against it had been disproved by the report of the Massachusetts Commission.

"If character is to be the basis of this nation, women must receive more than three and five dollars a week," he shouted, and the crowd cheered.

He also said, referring to women in the Bull Moose ranks:

"The most wonderful and inspiring feature of the Progressive party is the fervor, enthusiasm and crusading spirit of the men and women enlisted in our cause.

"As that saintly woman, Jane Addams, said in Chicago: 'It is the first time in the history of the country that a great party has pledged itself to the protection of children, to the care of the aged, to the relief of overworked girls, to the safeguarding of overburdened men.'"

All Governor Johnson's dates after Thursday have been canceled, as he is in need of a complete rest. He will be back in New England, however, between October 20 and 26. He will then speak in New Bedford, Fall River, Providence, Montpelier and Barre, Vt., and will spend a few days in Maine.

TAFT AND GOVERNORS AT BROCKTON FAIR

President Taft and the Governors of every State in New England have accepted invitations to attend the coming Brockton Fair as guests of the management. The President will be at the fair on Boston day, October 3. One hundred and fifty detectives have been specially employed to see that the President is protected during his visit. The President will be entertained at a special reception while at the fair.

PRESIDENT STARTS FOR BEVERLY TODAY

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 25.—The welcome of the State was extended to President Taft by Governor Tener and his staff today when the chief executive arrived at 6:35 a. m. to participate in the semi-centennial celebration of the Loyal War Governors' Conference held here during the second year of the Civil War. The President reviewed a military parade after a tour of the city in an automobile. His reception was most cordial. The presidential party leaves here late today for Beverly.

CALLS EX-PRESIDENT UNFIT

TAFT WARNING ON DICTATORS

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—A warning that the control of the trusts through federal incorporation and regulation would create a monopoly of power which in the grasp of an unprincipled man could be used to perpetuate idle authority and make him a dictator who might be overthrown only by a revolution, is sounded by President Taft in an interview printed in an evening paper today. Discussing this phase of the Progressive platform, the President is quoted as saying:

"It would create the most monstrous monopoly of power in the history of the world, a power as much greater, as much more autocratic than that of a Caesar or a Napoleon as the business interests of the twentieth century are greater, more dominant and far-reaching than were those 2,000 or 100 years ago.

"An unprincipled man with such power in his grasp could perpetuate his authority, perhaps under legitimate forms, and become a dictator until his hold could be shaken loose only by revolution."

Promises Tariff Reduction.

Discussing the tariff, the President promised a reduction on a scientific rather than a haphazard basis, saying:

"The tariff should be revised so far as may be necessary to keep prices from being exorbitant, so that as I have explained in my speech of acceptance, the manufacturer shall receive only enough protection to pay the scale of high wages which obtains, and ought to obtain in this country, and secure a reasonable profit from the business.

"This may be done by the continuance of the Tariff Board's investigations into the facts which would enable Congress and the people to know what the tariff as to each schedule ought to be.

"The American public may rest assured that should the Republican party be restored to power in all legislative branches all the schedules in the present tariff of which complaint is made would be subjected to investigation and report without delay by a competent and impartial tariff board, and to the correction or change which may be necessary to square the rates with facts.

"So far as excessive prices might be due to illegal combinations, they can be dealt with under the anti-trust law."

The President states that the policy of the Republican party is "Not to shut out foreign manufacturers, but to foster American manufacturers and to keep the American workingman employed."

Defends Payne Tariff.

As to the Payne Tariff law the President says: "The Payne law has no more to do with advancing the cost of living than the latest Atlantic cable tariff. On the contrary, it has enabled the American workers to meet the cost of living and maintain his family in comfort.

"Under the operation of that law prosperity has been gradually restored since the panic of 1907. Practically every able-bodied man who is willing to is working, and in some of the larger industrial centres, as well as in other parts of the country, the demand for labor far exceeds the supply. City hotels have been literally filled with buyers from all sections of the Union, who report ready sales and empty shelves and are every purchasers of goods to replenish their stores.

"Farmers were never better off. Every legitimate industry is looking forward to still greater prosperity, provided the nation's progress shall not be halted by the benumbing glacier of free trade of the destructive lava stream of anarchy."

The President intimated that he would call an extra session of Congress for tariff revision.

"WE'LL BREAK SOLID SOUTH"

—Col. Roosevelt.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 25.—"We're out to break the solid South," observed Theodore Roosevelt to an Arkansas committeeman as the train rolled in here today. "Think we can do it?"

Roosevelt bases his expectations of polling a big vote in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Maryland and North Carolina on the discontent that he is informed exists among the old-line Republicans.

The reign of the Federal office holders in these States has been the cause of violent protest, and the malcontents are loudly declaring they will vote for Roosevelt.

"Breaking the Solid South."

The Colonel feels confident that, of the Southern States mentioned, he will carry Oklahoma, Georgia, Maryland and North Carolina. As to the others he thinks he has a fighting chance. All the states will be stumped by the Colonel as vigorously as he did in Oklahoma in his rapid dash of yesterday.

Roosevelt reached here early this morning for a seven hours' stay. On his way to Memphis he will speak at several small Arkansas towns.

On his tour of Oklahoma he was greeted at Tulsa and accompanied from Tulsa to Oklahoma City by representatives of Roosevelt's women clubs.

Colonel Roosevelt attacked Woodrow Wilson's record as a Democrat, in a speech at McAlister before leaving for Arkansas.

Criticises Wilson.

"I noticed two statements by Mr. Wilson," said Colonel Roosevelt, "which are comically at variance. In one he expresses great satisfaction with his party. He says the Democratic party has had substantially the same program for six-teen years. If that is so Mr. Wilson didn't know it, for sixteen years ago he voted against Mr. Bryan.

"More than that, the party hasn't had the same program for sixteen years. It has had, every conceivable kind of a program. Mr. Bryan ran the first time, Mr. Parker next, then Mr. Bryan ran again. Now it is Mr. Wilson. Mr. Wilson knows perfectly well that the party never builded a venture for one moment to adopt its program of sixteen years ago. Its program then was free silver. Mr. Wilson left it because its program was free silver.

"I ask Mr. Wilson whether he means that if the progress today were free silver he would vote for it, and if not, why he bolted. He can choose either horn of the dilemma, but he has got to sit on one of the two horns."

"The Doctor told us Sanatogen is just what you need for your nerves"

UNCONSCIOUSLY, perhaps, thousands of men and women, in their desire to forge ahead and accomplish, find themselves suddenly approaching the brink of nervous breakdown. . . .

And how many men and women—under just such circumstances—look back with gratitude to the friendly interest that told them of the remarkable revitalizing and upbuilding powers of Sanatogen, the food-tonic.

If your nerves are to be kept keyed up and brimming with the health that permits you to keep in the van these strenuous days—they must be fed. When nerves lose their vitality—due to overwork, worry or illness—other normal bodily functions also become impaired. Restless sleep, disturbed digestion, physical lassitude, insomnia, are all traceable to nerve tire. Sanatogen is intended especially to combat the debilitating ravages of nerve exhaustion. Its scientific combination of purest protein and organic phosphorus —in readily assimilable form—imposes no tax upon digestion—no artificial, harmful stimulation. Sanatogen is just pure concentrated energy and food—replenishing the strength and reserve of the overtaxed nervous system, helping other food to digest and nourish.

Over 16,000 physicians have placed the seal of their approval and endorsement upon Sanatogen as the real, the scientific food and tonic. YOU may find the answer to your nerve troubles in its use.

Prof. Thomas B. Stillman, M.Sc., Ph.D.

The well-known research chemist of Steven's Institute, writes: "The chemical union of the constituents of Sanatogen is a true one, representative of the highest skill in the formation of a potent, contrasting phosphorus in the organic molecular condition, and so combined that digestion and assimilation of Sanatogen are rendered complete with greatest ease."

Charles D. Sigsbee,

Rear Admiral, U. S. Navy, writes:

"After a thorough trial of Sanatogen, I am convinced of its merit as a food and that its beneficial effects are beyond doubt."

George Ade.

The humorist, writes:

"I have used Sanatogen a trial and I am convinced of its merits."

David Belasco

The eminent dramatic author, writes: "It gives me pleasure to let you know the wonderful beneficial results I have experienced from the use of Sanatogen. Following a severe nervous indisposition which upset the nerves, and I heartily recommend it to all who, like myself, are obliged to overwork."

Harrison Fisher

The well-known artist, writes: "I have used Sanatogen from the first of the year, and I find it a wonderful tonic. I am recommending it to my overworked friends."

A Remarkable Book FREE Upon Request

The work of a physician-author, beautifully illustrated, which tells you some really interesting things about your nervous system, facts which vitally affect you well-being and which, therefore, you ought to know. should be considered in establishing new banking relations or in changing old banking affiliations.

The location of the Fourth-Atlantic National Bank, at the corner of Kilby and State Streets, makes it most convenient of access from all parts of Boston. It is in the heart of the financial section, approximate to markets, the dry goods, the shipping and the great jobbing centres.

It offers special service to executors, administrators of estates, guardians, trustees, minors and women who are often puzzled as to where to deposit trust funds, dividends or income. It invites you to discuss its advantages with its officers, or write to

WILL HUSSELL GIVES $40,000 CONTEST PARTY

By WILL HUSSEL.

I don't want to claim everything in sight, but that meeting of my friends last night to form a William Russell Sunday AMERICAN $10,000 Campaign Committee was enough to make a fellow feel like the "White Hope" in this contest.

As I told you yesterday, Jim Spowter put the bee in my bonnet, made me promise to be a candidate, and got up last night's meeting of all the fellows we both know. About a hundred of them were asked in. Forty-two showed up. Eleven sent postal cards or messages to explain their absence. Jim said this was a mighty fine percentage.

Spowter is our young representative to the Legislature. I was on his campaign committee for two years. This year he didn't need one. Ours is a progressive community—progressive without the capital "P" if you please—and Jim has been that kind of a representative.

Largely Testimonial.

I'm not going to tell you about the first part of the meeting, because it was largely testimonial. Spowter told them what they were there for. He said I'd been a wheelhorse in every undertaking in our town since my high school days. He rang in baseball, politics, church entertainments, the Fourth of July regatta, my work for Old Home Week and all that kind of thing.

And I sat and tried to blush. When they gave three cheers I felt like jumping out the window, but my legs were so weak I couldn't have got over to it.

Then he said I was now a candidate for something on my own account, that he had nominated me against my wishes, and that the whole bunch would see me elected.

And they gave three cheers all over again.

Then he asked the town up into districts, as he said he would do, and named a captain for each of these districts from the forty-two fellows present.

And thus I am started on my way to-wards the $10,000 prize offered by the Sunday AMERICAN.

Mentions Special Offer.

I didn't say very much, when it came my turn, but I did call everybody's attention to the remarkable offer of the Sunday AMERICAN to credit with 5,000 extra votes everybody who sends in ten subscriptions to the Sunday AMERICAN—for six months, twelve months or thirty-six months—before Saturday, October 5, at 10 p. m.

The William Hussel Campaign Committee means to take advantage of this special offer in the fall.

We are not going to hold back a single subscription. As fast as one is secured in it goes to the Contest Editor, together with the guarantee in a money order.

I had supposed that one had to keep the subscriptions together until he had a lot of ten. This isn't so. Spowter looked it up yesterday in Boston.

He also looked up another thing for me. I had noticed in the upper left-hand corner of the subscription blanks a place where it says:

"No. ——."

I wondered what we had to write in up there.

Spowter found out that the contestants are to write nothing in that blank. It is the only space on the subscription blank that the contestant is not to fill in. This space is for the Sunday AMERICAN people. They write the number in themselves.

So that we have got our bearings in the contest and are all ready to proceed.

I forgot to tell you about Ned Duffy.

Ned came across at the meeting with a corking suggestion.

"Why not give a minstrel show?" asked Ned. "We can get it ready in ten weeks and everybody will go on.

"We'll get a lot of fun out of it and we ought to raise at least a couple of hundred dollars. Then we can all subscribe to the Sunday AMERICAN, in our own names, and in the names of our cousins and our sisters and our aunts before or after every rehearsal we can hold a meeting of the Campaign Committee.

Everybody thought well of this suggestion.

It looks as if it would be adopted.

As I said at the beginning, I don't claim everything in sight, but certainly I've got a lot of loyal friends—and we propose to make everybody step lively.

The Contest Manager asks us today to remind readers of the AMERICAN that everybody who enrolls this week will be entered in the race with 800 votes to his or her credit. Those who enter next week cannot expect those 800 votes.

Everybody, of course, knows that the first prize is $10,000, and that there are five "district" prizes of $1,000 each, besides 1405 other prizes. The coupon printed DAILY is worth 5 votes, the coupon printed on SUNDAYS 25 votes.

The biggest thing just now is the special offer of 5,000 extra votes for ten subscriptions. These subscriptions may be for any of the three periods.

This seems to be your opportunity to win $10,000.

HELEN CLARK, AGED 5 YEARS, KILLED BY AUTO IN CHELSEA

Probe Chelsea Auto Accident That Cost Little Girl's Life

The automobile department of the Massachusetts Highway Commission is investigating the killing of little five-year-old Helen Clark, who was run down Monday by an automobile driven by Albert Mitchell, chauffeur for Nathan Eisman, a wealthy wool merchant living at No. 629 Commonwealth avenue.

Mitchell's license may be suspended by the Highway Commission pending the final disposition of the court case. The chauffeur is held in $2,000 for a hearing on a charge of manslaughter.

The child was struck by the automobile at the corner of Parker street and Broadway, Chelsea, and instantly killed.

ENTRIES ASSURE BIG APPLE SHOW

All New England apple growers are interested in the apple show to be held by the Boston AMERICAN in conjunction with the Brockton Fair, beginning next Tuesday.

When the fair opens its gates it will present an exhibition which will be a lesson to New Englanders who are under the impression that the East cannot produce apples as good in appearance and quality as the Pacific Coast. The exhibits, to be displayed in a tent near the main entrance, will be convincing proof that New England can produce fruit that excels the output of the West.

Entries are coming in from all sections, indicating that the exhibition will be the best apple show ever held in the State.

The Brockton Fair is the largest in New England, and the apple exhibition will be a feature which will attract visitors from all over the States. The exhibits will indicate the possibilities of New England soil and show the results of modern methods in apple culture.

To those who are interested in money-making opportunities and the advancing of a neglected industry the apple show will be doubly interesting.

The exhibition will tell the people of New England that Western apples are sold here because the East has failed to take advantage of a remarkable opportunity.

Here are the classes and the prizes offered by the AMERICAN for the Brockton show:

For the best plate collection of apples, to contain not less than ten varieties and not more than twenty plates. Five apples to a plate. Three prizes, $5, $3, $1.

For the most attractive basket of apples, three prizes, $5, $2 and $1.

Foliage and berries may be used in decorating, but no flowers.

For the best display in the show a special prize, a handsome cup, will be given. Single Plate Exhibit, five premiums to a plate, prizes to be awarded for best plates in each class:

PRISON SHIRT CONTRACT ENDS

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 25.—The contract between the Rhode Island State prison for making shirts for a Chicago firm for 2½ cents each, which was exposed by the Boston AMERICAN, has been abrogated.

The AMERICAN told the story of this cheap prison labor fully a month ago. It was told how the Chicago firm paid Rhode Island 29 cents a day per man for shirt making. This was the most favorable contract for the Chicago firm of which there was any record.

Kentucky, for instance, received for prison labor sixty-five cents a man and Michigan, eighty-five cents a man. The output of the Rhode Island prison was 1,000,000 shirts a year.

This cheap prison-made work was thus placed in competition with that of free women and it was pointed out that it brought wages down to a starvation point.

To End Work December 1.

The Chicago firm that had the prison contract is the Sterling Manufacturing Company. Word has been received here that the Chicago firm has agreed to abrogate the contract and abandon any claims it may have on the State, and that shirtmaking in the prison, so far as this firm is concerned, will cease on December 1 next.

The machinery of the Chicago company which is at the prison in this State will be removed within ten days after the work ceases. The ending of the shirtmaking is a victory for the AMERICAN and for Governor Pothier, who brought into existence the Rhode Island Board of Control.

Governor Pothier made this statement:

Saves $150,000, Says Pothier.

"I am convinced that the State Board of Control and Supply has saved the State of Rhode Island fully $150,000 by obtaining the abrogation of the present prison shirt contract.

"With this contract abrogated the Board of Control and Supply can now go into the market, advertise for bids and make another shirt contract at ruling prices which, according to information at hand, are largely in excess of what the State has been receiving."

HOME RULE SURE SAYS LEEN, BACK

Dr. T. F. Leen, member of the Boston School Committee who returned today from Europe on the steamship Franconia, feels confident that Ireland will get Home Rule.

"The people of Ireland think that there is no better government in the whole world than the English government for England, but they want their own government for local Irish affairs," said Dr. Leen.

"I was amazed at the healthful glow of economic conditions over there. I had no idea they had travelled so far along economic lines. The cities I visited were busy and growing. Prospects are bright.

"I spent much time with Joseph Devlin and Augustin Roach. They assured me that the Redmond Home Rule bill was bound to pass in its present form, but that the Lords would veto it.

"They said that Parliament would next year override the Lords' veto and that Ireland would certainly get Home Rule."

Dr. Leen was met by a number of friends, many of them politicians who feel that he is the logical candidate for mayor in 1914.

Roy McCardell, former editor of Puck, famous humorist and journalist, says:

"It's a great pleasure to recommend a good tobacco, and Tuxedo is the best tobacco I ever smoked. A great favorite with newspaper men."

Roy McCardell

Mild and Enjoyable, Cool and Soothing—That is Tuxedo.

If you are a Tuxedo smoker you understand why famous men in every walk of life smoke Tuxedo—because it is the one pipe-tobacco that affords complete enjoyment and satisfaction. Tuxedo cannot sting, bite or irritate the delicate membranes of the mouth or throat—as every Tuxedo smoker knows.

Tuxedo

The Perfect Pipe Tobacco

Eddie Foy, the famous comedian, now starring in "Over the River," says:

"I stand firm for Tuxedo. It's so soothing and comforting it would change the disposition of a chronic grouch."

Eddie Foy

Only the mild, tender, lower leaves of Burley tobacco are used in Tuxedo. Under the famous "Tuxedo process," this high-grade tobacco is made to burn slowly, and the result is a cool, healthful, enjoyable pipe-smoke that soothes and rests, and refreshes the tired business or professional man.

Tuxedo Tobacco is widely imitated, but no other manufacturer has succeeded in discovering the "Tuxedo process." Your first pipeful of Tuxedo will prove this statement.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE STREET, Sept. 25.—Midday. The Boston market started with a fair volume of business and with prices generally good. Trading grew quiet in the first hour and near the end of that period prices were irregular. United Fruit showed the most gain among active stocks, being quoted more than a point or more higher.

Among coppers, Indiana, United States Smelting and Granby were up. Old Colony, Mayflower, Franklin, Shattuck, Arizona, Calumet and Arizona and Wolverine were lower, the latter showing the most loss.

Amalgamated Quoted Higher.

When the New York market opened Amalgamated was one of the most prominent stocks on the list, advancing in early transactions to 93¾. It was largely bought because it is believed that the increase in Anaconda's dividend rate implies that the rate of Amalgamated will be increased in October. Most of the speculative interest was centred in the industrials and many of those stocks made gains. Among them was Steel common, ⅛, and American Smelting, ¾. Some of the equipment shares also sold higher.

Canadian Pacific was a strong issue in New York, as a result of buying in London on the earnings report. After opening ½ higher in New York, it made still further gains. Southern Pacific was up ⅛, while R. & O. and Missouri Pacific gained ⅛ each.

The Curb was steady.

American stocks in London reflected cheerful sentiment.

Copper Price Is Higher.

The London copper market opened steady with spot and futures each 1s. 3d. higher.

A New York dispatch says the sales of electrolytic copper (for November delivery) were made this morning at slightly more than 17¾ cents a pound. A renewed European demand is also reported, while it is said that domestic buying is on a larger scale. It was thought in trade circles this morning that the price of the metal is likely to be generally advanced during the day. Domestic buying began again yesterday.

Financial News in Brief.

The Fourth-Atlantic National Bank has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent, payable October 1, to stock of record September 28. This is initial dividend on Fourth-Atlantic and places stock on a 7 per cent. basis. Before consolidation the Atlantic and Fourth Banks paid dividends of 8 per cent. and 7 per cent. respectively.

The United States Treasury had a working balance of $87,048,711, yesterday, of which $52,972,725 was in the banks and Philipine treasury. The total general fund amounted to $148,355,553. The renewal of call money at 4¾ per cent. in New York showed more optimism in the banking circles as to the monetary situation.

Many speculators were disappointed because the increase in the steel common dividend rate was not larger. The company's directors showed conservatism in the face of an opportunity to make a much larger distribution to shareholders. There is very little attempt in any direction at present to foster speculation.

General Manager Miller of the Wabash road is of the opinion, based upon personal observation in seven States, that the government estimate of 2,900,000,000 bushels for the corn crop is too low.

When Amalgamated directors meet about a month hence it is expected they will increase the dividend rate of their company because of the Anaconda increase, if for no other reason. Amalgamated owns 3,158,362 of the outstanding 4,332,500 Anaconda stock and will receive from its Anaconda holdings $3,158,362 a year more in dividends.

One forecast of 1913 conditions in the steel industry is that at the end of this year unfilled tonnage on United States Steel Corporation books will be in the vicinity of 6,000,000 tons.

The limitations at present of transportation facilities are causing great worry in business as well as in railroad circles. It is estimated that by October 25 there will be demand for 200,000 more cars than can be furnished. This will retard shipments in almost every line of trade.

That cotton is getting to be an important Southern California crop is shown by the offer of the First National Bank of Los Angeles to lend Imperial Valley growers $35 on each bale. A yield of 8,000 bales of first class cotton is expected this year.

In the last fiscal year Great Northern earned a balance for dividends equivalent to over $10 per share on the $293,989,800 stock outstanding as against $8.34 per share earned in 1911 and $8.47 per share earned in 1910.

The operating revenue of the Baltimore & Ohio increased $587,756 in August and the net of the same $59,051. The increase in net since July 1 was $205,762.

The New York sub-treasury gained $2,300,000 from banks there yesterday and since Friday has gained $5,598,000.

GIBSON SURE OF ACQUITTAL

M GOSHEN, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Attorney Burton W. Gibson today declared in his cell here that he will not be indicted for the murder of the Countess Rosa Mesnekil Szabo. The prosecution, according to the accused lawyer, has failed to corroborate any of the evidence it claims to have, and he and his wife are confident that he will be a free man in a short time.

"As a lawyer," Gibson said, "I know that it is an easy matter to establish a prima facie one and have the defendants held for the Grand Jury. That is probably what will happen at the hearing before Judge Royce on Monday.

"But the grand jurors of Orange County are hard-headed business men, and they will insist upon the fullest kind of an investigation. I am willing to wager everything I own that, after that investigation is made, I will not be indicted."

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Our British cousins are very much alarmed over the increasing number of American cars sold in England. At a recent meeting inaugurated by the editor of the London Daily Mail seventeen of the leading British automobile manufacturers heard Lord Montague of Beaulieu and S. F. Edge say a few things about American cars which did not tend to make them feel particularly comfortable.

They suggested that a big merger be formed by several of the existing companies and that this new company immediately prepare to build 5,000 cars of good quality to be sold at between $1,800 and $1,250 each. Mr. Edge declared that even if the British car did cost a trifle more, this disadvantage could be offset by an appeal to British patriotism and by passing a law which would impose an almost prohibitive tariff on low-priced American cars.

Lord Montague said it was a fallacy to believe that American cars were cheap and bad. On the contrary, he argued, they are cheap and good.

Walter Flanders, when he heard of the discussion, remarked that it was futile for the European makers to try to stem the tide of the American output of the European market, for it is already so well under way that its complete success is assured. He says that even with a prohibitive tariff the American automobile would sell because they would be superior to anything that the British or any other European manufacturer could produce.

J. M. Linscott, distributor of the Reo, has just returned from the factory in Lansing, Mich., where he went to look over the new Reo models, and incidentally make arrangements for early shipments. Mr. Linscott, with true Yankee ingenuity, got one over on the railroads last Spring, when there was a car famine and the railroad people told him they could get only two cars out to Lansing to ship his automobiles to—this city. Mr. Linscott then shipped several carloads of empty barrels to Lansing and was right there on the job when they arrived and had them loaded up with Reos, which were hurried back to Boston. Thus, his Yankee foresight beat the car famine and he got through the whole automobile trade at the time. He has been assured by his factory officials that he will get early shipments of the new models.

CARDINAL TALKS TO COLLEGIANS

His Eminence, William Cardinal O'Connell, graced the opening exercises for the new term of Boston College today and delivered a brief sermon on "To Know, Love and Serve God."

The exercises were held in the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Harrison avenue, adjoining the college premises. The student body, numbering over 1,100, and the largest in the college history, was present in full. Their relatives and friends swelled the attendance.

The Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., President of Boston College, celebrated mass, assisted by members of the faculty.

Cardinal O'Connell sat on the Episcopal throne within the sanctuary, attended by the Rev. Fr. Brosnan, S.J., and the Rev. Fr. Burns, S.J., of the College.

After the mass His Eminence spoke to the students. In the course of his sermon he said that the great number of collegians before him brought joy to his heart and that it showed the wonderful progress that is going on. He paid fitting tribute to the faculty for its untiring efforts. He urged the collegians to be loyal to the faculty, than whom they will never have better friends. In closing the Cardinal urged the students to be strong, true and faithful sons of Boston College.

After the address the Cardinal received the students who won the scholarships he offers annually. These students are Francis A. O'Brien of South Boston, Fred Gillis of Dorchester, James Brennan of Brighton, Harold Rowan of Jamaica Plain and Joseph McHugh of East Boston.

MADAM! IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT TAKE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Waste-clogged bowels, torpid liver and decaying food in stomach cause the sick headache, gas, backache sallowness, biliousness and indigestion.

All women get bilious, headachy and constipated—simply because they don't exercise enough. They don't eat coarse food or enough fruit and green vegetables. Those are nature's ways of keeping the liver and thirty feet of bowels active; but very few women employ them. The next best way is delightful, fruity Syrup of Figs.

Nearly all ills of women can be overcome with Syrup of Figs alone. There is no need to have sick headache, backache, dizziness, stomach sour and full of gases, bilious spells, sallowness, coated tongue, bad breath, bad complexion, nervousness and depression. The surest and safest remedy is one or two teaspoonfuls of delicious Syrup of Figs. Try this tonight—you'll feel splendid in the morning when the sour bile, clogged-up waste and poisonous matter have been gently but thoroughly moved on out of your system, without nausea, griping or weakness. Your head will be clear, complexion rosy, breath sweet, stomach regulated so more constipation, gases, pains and aches.

It is simply a matter of keeping your stomach, liver and bowels clean and regular. Then you will always be well —always look and feel your best.

But get the genuine—the old reliable. Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse, with contempt, the so-called Fig Syrups sometimes substituted to fool you. The true, genuine, bears the name California Fig Syrup Company; look for this on the label.

Prove Boston Hospitality

To 800 Distinguished Guests of Our City

During this week there will be held in Boston

The International Congress of Chambers of Commerce

The delegates, who are now arriving, include, in addition to 250 prominent Americans, nearly 600 of the most representative men of these foreign lands:

Algiers, Arabia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Belgium, Bermuda, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, East Africa, Ecuador, England, Egypt, France, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, India, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Scotland, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tasmania, Trinidad, Turkey, Uruguay, Venezuela

Each delegate's geometry is marked at the top of his badge.

When You See This Badge

which each guest will wear, do everything you can to make him know that Boston is honored by his coming.

Many of the visitors speak but little English. They are unfamiliar with the streets and customs of our city. They will need direction in finding hotels, cars, stores, points of interest. They will appreciate a cordial greeting.

These are the distinguished men of the commercial world —bankers, merchants, manufacturers, diplomats, publicists. It is our privilege as well as our duty to extend courtesy to them. Their opinion of Bostonians will pass throughout the whole civilized world. A thoughtful act of yours may have untold influence.

But, after all, the best reason for hospitality is simply to make their stay pleasurable. Let every one of us—whether merchant, workingman or newsboy—when he meets a wearer of this badge, do his own share as a representative of Boston.

Mrs. Numano Praises Boston 'Old and Quiet, Like London'

MRS. Y. NUMANO, WIFE OF DELEGATE

"I like American women best of any women. They are so bright and charming. You meet them once and you feel like you have known them a long time."

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

A timid, modest little Japanese lady, with a round girlish face and shrill dark eyes, brimming over and sparkling with intelligence and good nature, is holding her own right royally against the ladies of the nobility of other countries gathered this week at the Copley-Plaza, which is the headquarters for the International Chamber of Commerce convention. This little lady who glides about so quietly is the pretty little wife of Y. Numano, acting Consul General of Japan at New York, and she is certainly keeping her eyes wide open every moment. Observation is her strong point.

"Oh, yes, I do love America better than any other country. I like the American people, and they like me, too," she added with a glint of mischief in her dancing eyes.

"I'd rather live in America than in any other country. I did live in Portland, Oregon, for two years and I do love the American people so much.

"No, no, I'm not a suffragette. Oh dear, no! I certainly don't believe in it," she declared as emphatically as her pretty broken English would allow. "I'm a very good housekeeper and I'm satisfied with that. Every woman should be content to be a good housekeeper, a comfort to her husband and a good mother to her children. If she can do all that and do it well, then she won't have much time for suffrage. Do you think so?

"I think that Boston is more like London than any other city. It seems older and more quiet like London."

"But I like American women best of any women. They are so bright and so charming. You meet them once and you feel like you have known them a long, long time. Oh, yes, I like them so much.

"I have only seen the Boston women on the streets, but they seem so—what you call, capable; so strong and so independent. They look so very nice also."

"What do you think of Boston itself," I asked her, and she was ready at once with her answer.

"It is such a pretty city, so much prettier than New York and so much more quiet and peaceful."

"Then you don't agree with the artist who came over here to paint the beautiful spots of Boston and said he could find none?"

"Did any artist really say that? Then I wonder if he was really an artist. I really think Boston very, very beautiful and I have seen many spots here beautiful enough for any artist, and I'm sure I haven't seen them all either.

"American women are so very fashionable. They are always so perfectly dressed and they wear their clothes just like queens."

The little lady herself was gowned in a simply-fashioned creation of black, made after the latest style and which accentuated her childishly slender figure as well as the pure, transparent whiteness of her skin. Her hair was done in a Psyche, and as she talked along in her pretty, dainty fashion, accentuating her remarks with pretty gestures, poising her well-shaped head to one side like a bird when she asked a question and twinkling her eyes when her keenly-developed sense of humor was stirred.

ALICE NIELSEN HOME AGAIN

sailu bow, was seen waving her handkerchief to her friends. She looked bright and well—and pretty—though the sea had not been kind to her en route.

On the way over I had several pleasant meetings with the American prima donna. She has spent the last five months chiefly in Italy and Germany. Before sailing she heard Mary Garden's Tosca, at the Opera Comique in Paris, and thought it wonderful.

Miss Nielsen's Summer Abroad.

"I left America in April, on the Lapland," said Miss Nielsen, "expecting to sing in Germany. But hardly had I landed when I heard of my poor mother's death. That changed my plans. My mother had been always very dear to me. She had become my child—my baby. And I missed her terribly.

"After traveling here and there in northern Europe I reached Milan, where I had just finished studying the part of Louise, when death took my old professor from me. I felt his loss, too, keenly. I found another maestro, with whom I perfected myself in the role of Zerlina, which I shall sing at Montreal, and worked hard on several other parts in the repertory, among them Cio-Cio-San and Susanna of The Secret of Susanna,' in which I am to appear next Spring in Boston. For the next week or so I shall rehearse Susanna at the Boston Opera House. Then I shall go on to Toronto to begin a rather long and important concert tour, which will take me through Canada to the Pacific Coast and thence back to the East.

Believes in English Tongue.

"I am hoping to devote one concert program exclusively to songs in English. I am a firm and warm believer in the beauty of the English tongue. It seems to me that it is now high time we heard at least part of our operas in English. Our national pride, if nothing else, should make us anxious to encourage the new movement for the promotion of grand opera in our vernacular. I cannot understand why all our singers do not try to help that plan. They and the public could soon make it possible. I know that many Italian artists, among whom are Zenatello and Maria Gay, would be delighted to sing English in this country.

"Do we not sing in foreign tongues abroad? Then why should not our foreign friends be equally courteous when they appear here in grand opera?

"They don't all see the question from my standpoint, though, in Europe. Some years ago, for instance, when I was engaged for one of the Pavelli operas in Germany, I met Lilli Lehmann. She asked me in what language I would sing my part. I told her in English. On that she grew indignant and informed me that in Germany I ought only to sing German.

"I had a very deep respect for Lilli Lehmann. But this annoyed me.

"'You Europeans don't sing English in New York,' said I. 'Why should we have to learn your language in Europe?'

"I feel quite sure that before long we shall have foreign operas—some, at all events performed in our own language here. If I did not, do you suppose I would have committed myself, as I have done today, by joining the society, which has been founded in New York and other cities to promote the idea?"

Miss Nielsen told me that she had never heard a performance of "Louise." She admires that work, but thinks it is too long and loose in construction.

"The great air in the third act," she went on, "is terribly difficult. The tessitura is a dreadful stumbling block and it is hard to get the right ecstasy into Charpentier's music."

In "The Secret of Susanna," Wolf-Ferrari's dainty one-act "Intermezzo," Antonio Scotti will impersonate the young husband who suspects his charming wife when he smells tobacco smoke in his drawing room.

Wolf-Ferrari, by the bye, assured me in Munich a short time ago that the germ of his delightful little work was a crude farce known in the original as "Tobacco Stench."

As to the "loose construction" of "Louise," which seems to disturb Miss Nielsen, Andre Messager (now co-director of the Paris Opera House) informed me when I met him lately at Mary Garden's pretty home in the Avenue Malakoff that, though Charpentier's opera had been produced with such success, it had never been completed.

"At the rehearsals of 'Louise' in Paris," said M. Messager, who at that time was conductor at the Opera Comique, "Charpentier cut and changed and rearranged his work so much that, if we had waited till his taste was satisfied, it might never have been heard at all in public.

"So at last we took things into our own hands and produced the opera."

"Charpentier," added M. Messager, "wrote to me lately, asking me why we did not produce his 'La Vie du Poete' at the Paris Opera House. I told him that I had never seen his score and did not know if it was even finished. He answered that it was ready and suggested that we should be happy to accept it without question.

"On that I sent him a few lines, offering to accept his opera blindfold, if he would promise not, to touch his 'completed' score. He ignored the challenge."

MISS RICHARDSON, LYNN GIRL TO BE WED NEXT MONTH

2 Mismated Shoes Play Part in Lynn Factory Romance

A pair of mismated shoes was Cupid's foil when two years ago it brought together for the first time Milliage Lawrence Thornton of No. 31 Estaw avenue, Lynn, and Lucile A. Richardson of No. 5 City Hall square, Lynn. Thornton is sergeant of Company E, Eighth Regiment.

Mr. Thornton is employed in a Lynn shoe factory and Miss Richardson is in the same factory as supervisor of the stitching room. Two years ago a pair of mismated shoes were brought to Miss Richardson's attention. She immediately took them down to Mr. Thornton to have the matter rectified. This was their first meeting. The matter of the mismated shoes was promptly adjusted and they have been "keeping company" ever since—not the shoes, but Mr. Thornton and Miss Richardson.

Their engagement was announced last month and they are to be married on October 30 by the Rev. Mr. Coffin.

CITY LEAGUE PENNANT TEAM ASKS SWEATERS INSTEAD OF MEDALS

Sweaters are more popular with the champion amateur baseball team of South Boston than medals or group pictures, according to a protest received at City Hall today from the boys who won the Municipal League pennant. Each member of the St. Augustine baseball team, champions of the Municipal League, was awarded a medal and a group picture of the team was presented to each boy. The players desire sweaters similar to those which were awarded to the East Boston team, winner of last year's pennant. Councilor Kenny took their request to the Mayor today.

WALDO'S GAMBLING POLICY UNDER FIRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—It was learned today that preparations are being made to probe Police Commissioner Waldo's policy in regard to gambling when the Aldermanic police graft investigating committee meets again next Saturday. Emory R. Buckner, chief counsel for the committee, decided on this move as a result of Commissioner Waldo's testimony concerning the appointment of thirty-seven alleged perjurors to the force after they had been rejected by former Police Commissioner Cropsy.

HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR AND MAKE IT SOFT AND BEAUTIFUL

Sage and Sulphur Will Make the Gray Hair Vanish and Remove Dandruff.

Who does not know the value of Sage and Sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy and in good condition?

As a matter of fact, Sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than Sage and Sulphur, if properly prepared.

The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put out an ideal preparation of this kind called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, in which Sage and Sulphur are combined with other valuable remedies for keeping the hair and scalp in clean, healthy condition.

If your hair is losing its color or constantly coming out, or if you are troubled with dandruff or dry, itchy scalp, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, use it according to the simple directions, and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in the appearance of your hair.

All druggists sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

WHETHER the Red Sox plan of reserving seats ahead only for those who want the same seats for the three games in Boston will go through with the National Commission's endorsement will be determined today at a meeting of the commission in New York. The commission will fix the price of tickets at that time, but there is no surety that it will attempt to fix the dates, because the Giants have not yet won the pennant and, in the event of an upset, the commission might make a mess of the matter by setting dates at this time. It is possible that the commission will set the dates, however, with the presumption that the Giants will win, and arrange other tentative dates which might be adopted in case the Giants were beaten.

BETWEEN now and October 6, when the season ends, the Giants must win three games—at the outside—to make the pennant a sure thing. Of course, the Giants will do that, but since the National Commission cannot wait until the eve of the World's Series before making plans the august body that presides over the destinies of baseball will probably be forced to make its preparations now. Including all sorts of contingencies, and trust that the plans will go through.

* * *

THE additional seats along the left field line at Fenway Park and along "Duffy's Cliff" have been completed, together with the boxes in front of the grand stand and the right field pavilion. The new stand in right field between the old 25-cent and 25-cent pavilions is nearly done. Carpenters are working now on the press stands upon the roof of the grand stand, which are planned to seat 300 newspaper men and operators. At last year's series, 252 newspaper representatives and telegraphers furnished news service to the United States and Europe.

REPRESENTATIVES of the "box-office end" of the Giants and Red Sox believe that the winning players will receive about $4,000 each, and the losers about $3,000. Other estimates have been higher than that, but, for every dollar that each winning player receives more than $60 has to be taken in at the gate, so you can judge for yourself how sizable the total figures will creep upwards over the amount distributed last year, when the winners were paid about $3,000 each.

* * *

WHILE the largest crowd that saw a game in Philadelphia last year was about 27,000, that being the limit of the space, Fenway Park will seat no more than 32,000 or 35,000—according to the estimate of the management—so that the aggregate receipts, while they are likely to be larger than in 1911, will not be sufficiently great, in the opinion of the magnates, to justify the hope of some fans that the winning ball players will receive $3,000 apiece.

* * *

THE National Commission has not yet determined who are eligible to participate in the division in the Red Sox team, but the men who were on the roster early enough to "cut in" are: Carrigan, Cady, Thomas and Nunamaker, catchers; Hall Wood, O'Brien, Collins, Pape and Bedient, pitchers; Stahl, Bradley, Yerkes, Hall, Wagner, Knue, Gardner and Engle, infielders, and Hooper, Speaker, Lewis and Henriksen, outfielders—a total of twenty-two men.

* * *

ACTING under orders not to risk an injury, the Red Sox played two slow games against the Yankees in the opening double-header, with the Yankees—the ones' home series this year. They lost the first, 5 to 2, and won the second, 3 to 1, just because they refused to "extend themselves" at any time. If a play could be made without undue exertion, all right. But nobody leaped for balls and nobody took a chance at injury on the base lines. Jake Stahl is determined to have no repetition of the Gardner incident.

* * *

THE Sox meet the Yankees again this afternoon, and tomorrow Ray Keating, champion pitcher of the New England League, whom the Yankees bought from Lawrence, will meet Van Dyke, the left-hander, who was second in the New England League percentage column and whose release was bought by the Red Sox. This will be the only chance fans will have this season to see the ex-New England League stars in action.

Half Your Vim

May Go to Waste Without an O-P-C

An O-P-C suspensory, with the average man, will double his vitality.

Just by saving a fearful drain on the nerve force—a constant tax with every step one takes.

Men much on their feet often lose half their energy, through this needless, wrongful, waste.

Even men who walk little lose more vim than any man can afford.

Every man who wants to keep at his best should wear an O-P-C.

There are countless men who lack endurance—lack poise and power—simply for want of an O-P-C.

A week will tell you what it means to you.

The O-P-C is the scientific suspensory, famous for 30 years. Our book tells why you need it—what it does. Write for it now.

All druggists guarantee you satisfaction with an O-P-C. No. 2, Lisle, 75c—No. 3, Silk, $1.00. Mailed direct from 45 W. Twenty-Fifth Street, Chicago, if your druggist will not supply you.

SEARS COUSINS WIN AT TENNIS

Boston has two representatives left in the womens' singles fall tennis tourney at the Longwood Cricket Club as the result of the play this morning.

Miss Evelyn Sears, the former National woman champion, and her cousin, Miss Eleonora R. Sears, are the two upon whom Boston now pins her hope for final honors.

Miss Eleonora R. Sears figured in one of the principal matches of the morning, winning in straight sets of 8—6 and 6—3, over Miss Edna Whiler of Plainfield. The scores of the sets do not in any way show the struggle that came out in this match. The largest gallery of the week was on hand to witness it, and applauded impartially the good strokes of both players.

Miss Sears has radically changed her game this year and in place of the lofted and ground strokes she now plays most of her shots with a underhand cut, which she varies with a cross court chop that proved very effective in defeating Miss Whiler.

Mrs. Barger Wallach, the former national woman champion from Newport, lost in another contest worth describing. Miss Mary Browne of California, the present national woman champion, was responsible for the passing of the ex-champion. This match only required two sets but as in the other contest mentioned one set was deuce and each point was hard fought.

The defeat of Miss Marion Fenno by Miss Dorothy Green of Philadelphia rather surprised the local contingent, who have watched the gradual improvement in the Country Club player's game with pride. Miss Green won apparently with ease, in straight sets of 6—4, 6—2.

Several matches were completed today in the women's doubles, the match between Miss Mary Browne and Mrs. Robert Williams versus Miss Marion Fenno and Miss Eleonora Sears causing many of the society folk gathered about the court to have a late luncheon.

Play also started in the handicap singles tourney the result of some of the matches showing in the following summary. Every available advantage point, every chair that Longwood could boast of and all the bankings surrounding the courts were crowded to their utmost capacity with the gallery who wanted to see the ruined doubles this afternoon. This form of play always appeals to the onlookers who like to compare the strength of the two sexes when "Greek meets Greek" in a contest where the play is just as strenous for the woman as the man.

From present indications Miss Browne will live up to her title which ranks her as the leading woman exponent of the country today. She meets Miss Evelyn Sears in the semi-final of the singles, while Miss E. R. Sears opposes Miss Green.

The Summary.

WOMEN'S SINGLES.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES.

Second round.

Miss Fiftee Griffith and Miss Amy Brewer defeated Mrs. Joseph Warren and Miss Hilda Williams, 6—4, 8—6, 6—4.

WOMEN'S HANDICAP TOURNEY.

Second round.

FRED LAKE WANTS TO BUY LYNN TEAM

Fred Lake made an offer for the Lynn team of the New England League, but President Frasey of Lynn stated later that the offer probably will be rejected, although a sale may be brought about if Lake will agree to the price set by the Lynn Baseball and Amusement Company.

Giants' Call to Wood

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

COME on, Joe Wood. Show us your wares,
And don't forget to bring them all,
For speed alone gains you no throne—
The Giants love that old fast ball.
Whatever goes into the air
Must fall again—remember that;
And all the speed that is your creed
May meet a heavy Giant bat.

DON'T think we do not know your worth;
Don't think we sneer at your success;
Of men like you there is a dearth.
But Tesreau's better—that's our guess.
The Red Sox pin their faith on you,
And we acknowledge that you're good,
But let us see you put it through.
Come on, Joe Wood!

FIX DATES FOR WORLD'S SERIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The playing dates and other details of the World Series are being fixed here today by the three members of the National Baseball Commission, Chairman August Herrmann and Presidents Thomas J. Lynch and Ban B. Johnson, respectively of the National and American Leagues.

The meeting is being held at the home of President John T. Brush of the New York National League Club, in Felham Manor. The trip to Mr. Brush's home is made necessary owing to the fact that he is suffering from an injury to his hip received in a recent automobile accident.

Others present at the meeting are President James McAleer and Secretary Robert McRoy of the Boston American League Club, and Secretary John A. Heydler of the National League.

Jack Lawless Will Play for Pontiacs

The Pontiac football team of Roxbury will try to duplicate their feat of last season when they held their opponents scoreless in every game. This year's team will be stronger and faster. Several fast high school boys will be numbered among the eleven.

Jack Lawless, who made an enviable record on the Medford High School team last season and who was picked as all-interscholastic quarterback, will play that position for the Pontiacs this season.

Among the other men are Escuger of Exeter, Twamsley and White, former St. Alphonsus stars; Tom Keaney, the former Boston Latin player; Tape, Anderson and Sheevin of West Roxbury High; Conley and Morrisey of the Bay View, and Heuser, McCarthy, Robinson, Fitzgerald and Duggan of last year's squad.

Games are desired with the U. S. S. Rhode Island, Cunningham Gym, Hilton A. A. and Pawtuxet A. A. of Rhode Island. Manager William E. Duggan, No. 40 Hillside street, Roxbury.

ORIENTS AFTER QUINCY.

The Orient Heights A. A. is very anxious to arrange a game with the Quincy A. A. on the Orient Heights playgrounds just as soon as possible. Quincy played the Orients away from home two years ago and were beaten 6 to 0 while the Orients went to Quincy last season and were in turn defeated, 6 to 0. Manager Innes thinks it betting but fair for the Quincy eleven to come to East Boston this year.

RECRUITS IN PITCHING DUEL

Another pitching duel is to be served up to the Boston fans. While the contest in question will not be of the same calibre of the now famous Wood-Johnson battle, it will, nevertheless, be just as heated and arouse considerable interest among the fans.

For the final game of the season at Fenway Park in the regular schedule, Manageres Stahl and Wolverton have decided to pit their crack youngsters, Hen Van Dyke and Ray Keating, against each other.

Throughout the entire New England circuit, where these young stars performed during the past season, it is a much mooted question as to which is the premier flinger. Up Lawrence way, where Keating is given credit for pitching the Lawrence club into the pennant, which caused New York to fork over $7,000 for his services, every fan proclaims Ray to be a world beater.

Yet up in Worcester County, where Van Dyke was the twirling pivot of Jesse Burkett's outfit, before he joined the Red Sox, the New England league followers are just as certain that Van is the boy, when it comes to deceiving the opposing batsmen.

The fans have been divided all the season over the question. They are divided today, and will be divided on the capabilities of the two big league recruits until the question is settled right tomorrow.

Big delegations from the two cities where Van Dyke and Keating held forth the past season, as well as from other New England league towns, are expected to be on hand tomorrow to watch the interesting battle between the two favorites.

Examine Gardner's Finger Tomorrow

Larry Gardner, upon the condition of whose little finger may depend the outcome of the world series between the Red Sox and the Giants, will have the wound he received at Detroit Saturday examined tomorrow by Dr. A. A. Cliff, the Red Sox surgeon, when for the first time, "fans" will learn what effect the injury may have upon the star third sacker's work in the big battle.

The points which were placed upon the little finger of the right hand, after Gardner broke the finger at the first joint last Saturday, have not been removed for fear of retarding the healing of the wound. The finger will be dressed tomorrow. There are twelve days more for the dislocated bone and torn finger to heal.

Sox Sluggers Do Not "Choke" Bat

Stahl's Men Are Free Swingers

By BILL BAILEY.

What's all this talk one hears about it being necessary to choke one's bat if he expects to hit the pitching of the modern twirler?

You have heard and read the stories Ty Cobb is one of those who remarks that you have to choke if you expect to get the base hits.

Take a look at the Boston Red Sox and you are at least likely to have some doubts on the subject. You may not be some convinced that choking of the bat isn't necessary. But you are bound to admit that there are two sides to the argument.

Because there are just two of the Red Sox regulars who choke their bats.

Among those who do not choke their bats are Sluggers Yerkes, Speaker, Lewis, Gardner and Cady. When Stahl is in the game the count is six to two against the choking of the war club.

The pitcher isn't counted, but when Wood is on the mound the fellow who grip the club near the handle have an other vote. Because Wood slio stands up there and whales at the ball, getting all the power he can behind his drive and grasping said drive-producer so near the handle that his left hand is on the knob.

You know there is a theory in baseball that choking the bat is more scientific. Those who favor that method claim that the pitchers of today break their curves so quickly that the fellow who grasps his bat at the very end and swings is sure to make a show of himself.

They claim that by choking the bat the slugger can hit quicker and, while he may not get the distance that the long swinger does, that he will get so many more base hits that he will be the gainer in the end.

It hasn't been so long ago that Tyrus Cobb was quoted on this proposition "Time was when I thought I could grab my bat at the very end and swing with all my might," said Tyrus. "But these curve ball pitchers broke me of that habit and ruined that belief.

"I realize now that the way to get the most base hits is to choke the bat and then meet the ball. I may not get the power behind the drive that I formerly got, but I get more hits. Because by choking the bat I am in position to hit quickly, and so take advantage of a quick breaking curve if it breaks where I can hit it.

Now, there are not many who are going to dispute what the Detroit slugger has to remark on the question of hitting. But at the same time you have this Boston club to take into consideration

There isn't a pitcher in the American League who is going to claim for a moment that the Red Sox can't hit. That is an accepted fact and if you don't believe it consult almost any pitcher of your acquaintance, and if he has the time he will tell you about the time that they made him take to the woods

* * *

Yet the only men who choke their bats on that club are Hooper, the man who leads off, and Wagner, the shortstop, who bats seventh.

There isn't a freer hitter or a longer swinger in the game than this Tris Speaker. And Yerkes, Gardner and Lewis stand up there and start their swings behind their backs

No one in the game is going to dispute that the free swinger is the lad who drives in the runs when he does connect with the ball

Chopping bits may be fine and the thing But when you see those lads from Boston standing up there with their hands at the very end of the handle and swinging from the shoulder you are bound to have some doubts about it

BOSTON GLOBE CONTRIBUTES $100 TO STAHL AUTO FUND

The Jake Stahl automobile fund took a leap of $1,2675 today and started on with good expectations for another jump during the day

The Boston Globe contributed $100 to the fund, the check being accompanied by a letter from General Charles H. Taylor, editor of the Globe, in which he praises the AMERICAN gift plan

This contribution was a splendid endorsement of the project of the Boston fans" to show their appreciation of Stahl Jake Stahl and the Red Sox have done for the city and the clean, enthusiastic sport in Boston

From a National League "Fan."

L. C. Page of the publishing house of L. C. Page & Co., who was a partner with the late William Hepburn Russell in the ownership of the Boston National league spn, sent a check for $25. He wrote

Sporting Editor,
Boston AMERICAN:

I take pleasure in sending the enclosed check for $25 for the automobile fund under the auspices of the Boston AMERICAN, for Jake Stahl, the deservedly successful manager of the fluston Red Sox.

The success of the Boston American Baseball Club is a joy to all loyal baseball "fans." American and National League rooters alike, and as one of the latter, here's hoping Manager Jake Stahl and his A-1 crowd of boss will bring the world's championship pennant home to Boston. Very sincerely yours,

L. C. PAGE.

That letter was a loyal and sportsman like contribution from a National League rooter and ought to be an inspiration to the other loyal fellows of Boston, all of whom ought to fall in line immediately for the cause of "Big Jake" Stahl

GEN. CHARLES TAYLOR GIVES $100 CHECK FOR STAHL FUND

General Charles H Taylor, editor of the Boston Globe, has sent a check for $100 to the Sporting Editor of the AMERICAN to help buy an automobile for "Jake" Stahl

General Taylor believes that the popular Red Sox leader should be honored by the fans," and says in the following note which accompanied his check

Sporting Editor,
Boston AMERICAN:

I heartily join in the movement to present Manager Stahl with a memento of the great and successful contest of 1912 in the shape of a handsome automobile. Fraternally yours,

Charles H. Taylor,
Editor Boston Globe.

P. S. I enclose check for $100.
C. H. T.

Another letter, enclosing a dollar, read as follows

Sporting Editor,
Boston AMERICAN:

Enclosed please find a dollar to help increase the Jake Stahl auto fund. Mr. Stahl is a fine type of the professional athlete and we should all be proud to honor him. With best wishes, I am, respectfully yours,

R. D. BUGG, Jr.

First to Follow Suggestion.

In reply to a suggestion made by the sporting editor of the AMERICAN urging every "fan" to send the price of the seat he usually occupies at a baseball game, this was the first response

Sporting Editor,
Boston AMERICAN:

Success is all I can see for the Jake Stahl auto fund. I am pleased to help the good cause along. Enclosed find 75 cents.

Yours very truly,
W. T. GILBERT.

Subscriptions to the fund are requested if possible, in check form, but money orders in preference to cash and to address their contributions to the sporting editor Boston AMERICAN

This is a project in which everybody in Boston should be interested The Red Sox under the management of Jake Stahl, have added all the fame to Boston needed to consider its standing in the world of sport and business The Tigers MADE Detroit, and if Boston needed any addi tional making the Red Sox have done it It is up to Boston now to show that the fin appreciates what Jake Stahl and his Red Sox have done

Let Everybody Contribute Now.

YOU, Mr. Baseball Enthusiast, are the fan who is urged to contribute now Don't wait for the other fellow to do it Everything that is left to anybody else is never done If everybody in Bo ston would contribute a dollar or two our special auto what Jake Stahl has done to uplift this town deserves more than a simple check or a couple of cents Let the whole of us put in our mite, and if a hundred thousand dollars were to be raised it would be done in no time Do it cheerfully and that's where would be no fund at all As evidence, however, that the generosity of Boston's "fans" of Boston do not do business that way is the fund the "fans" want to see everybody contribute

Let EVERYBODY contribute now put regularly the business men who have, I doubted and will continue to profit R. ularly and otherwise, but the Red Sox success

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

Between Love and Fame

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A PERPLEXED little girl named Hannah writes me:

"I will be eighteen in October, and have been keeping company with a young man three years my senior for over a year. We have been traveling in the same set since we were in school together, and I am sure he is all right. He is a good, steady, reliable young man, gets $23 a week and is considered a good catch by every one who knows him.

"Herein lies my trouble. I have, if I have been told by an artist in the musical world, a contralto voice which, if properly trained, would land me in the opera or stage line speedily. So I love music enough to devote my life to it. Why am enough to devote my life to it. Why do I love my art enough to give up Wallace? I know I cannot give up both.

Tables Reversed

THERE was no small doubt that the barber was a genius to a small way. He had the power of making good friends with his customers.

A youth entered his shop and sat down on a chair.

"Shave, sir?" remarked the barber, in an ordinary tone, as if that was the most likely thing that was wanted.

"You flatter me," remarked the youth. "I am afraid I can only do with a hair cut."

Thirty years later the same youth entered the same shop. The barber had grown old, but he had not lost his power of flattery.

"Hair-cut, sir?" he demanded.

The man sighed.

"You flatter me," said he. "I'm afraid I shall only do with a shave."

Looking Backward Over a Century's Evolution in Fashion

The gamut of fashion, an authority once said, extends through a century. In a hundred years women's clothes display the full possibilities of the modiste's invention.

Here are shown in silhouette the changes that fashion has wrought and, strangely enough, none of these many examples seems without its own particular attractiveness, even though they are so extremely varied.

To be sure, the natural figure appears to be adaptable to any lines that the modiste's art may design for it, but it has been the rule through the whole hundred years, as it is still, that the natural figure may be one thing and women's clothes shall be quite another.

Doing Things Well

By DOROTHY DIX

I HAVE received a letter from a young woman, who says:

"I am a working girl. It is absolutely necessary for me to earn my own living. I have had several good places since I left school, but I have lost each one because my handwriting is so bad. What shall I do?"

Learn how to write, little sister. Get you a copy book, and pen and ink, and sit down at a table and never get up until you have mastered the art of calligraphy. Spend hours, and days, and weeks, if necessary, acquiring a plain and legible hand-writing. Eat pot hooks' dream upward slants and downward slants and curves and curlicues. Give every particle of intelligence you've got, put every ounce of determination in you to learning to write, and, my word for it, you will soon have Jim the Penman looking like a carver of Egyptian hieroglyphics.

[illegible] not going to sit down before an [illegible] and [illegible] are your [illegible] all [illegible] too little intelligence [illegible] that you can't learn [illegible] haven't so little ambition that you are going to be a quitter the first time you strike a real difficulty in life, are you? When we find out what is our handicap in the race for success there is just one thing to be done, and that is to [illegible] that particular drawback.

There's just one way to get on in the [illegible] world. Every [illegible] and that is [illegible] There are plenty of good places for the competent, but there's no room for the [illegible] whose rules slips look like chicken tracks, or the bookkeeper whose ledger won't balance or the stenographer who can't spell.

Therefore it's up to you to decide whether you are going to be one of those invaluable employes who climb up to positions of trust and honor and profit or whether you become one of the shifting army of incompetents who are always looking for a job.

Why They Fail

People who fail in life always lay the blame on circumstances, or fate or the state of politics or heredity, or some other convenient scapegoat. This sets them down easy, and gives them a chance to sniffle, and cry, and make a bid for sympathy when they strike up for a loan. But the truth is that we make our own luck, little sister, and we are the architects of our own misfortunes just as much as we are of our own fortunes. The drunkard and the beggar on the street are self made men. Just as much as are Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Carnegie.

It doesn't make a bit of difference what we choose as a life work if we do it well. [illegible] of favor in any line. Goods [illegible] and of handiwork that we turn out, and this is something that women have yet to learn.

I know dozens of girls who have chosen stenography for a profession who blandly say: "I never could learn to spell," and it never seems to occur to them that their whole future success depends upon their learning to spell, and that they can find the whole art of how to get there in the dictionary. I know cooks who have cooked for forty years without ever learning how to make bread, or boil a potato properly, and will still wonder why they are always changing places.

I know dressmakers who admit that they are bad fitters, yet they go on ruining people's cloth year after year, and complaining about the fickleness of customers who never come back.

These women know where their faults lies, but they are too lazy and too indolent to correct it. And they are always poor and ill paid, for there's just one kind of work that commands a high price in the market, and that is first-class work. If you can do that you can write your own price tag for it.

Why can one dressmaker get $75 for making a gown while another can only get $37?

Because one woman turned out sloppy work and the other turns out a perfect job.

Why can one cook command a salary of $10 00 a year while another can only get $5 a week? Because one has mused the art of cookery to a science, and the other has never taken the trouble to learn even the rudiments.

Willing to Pay

Why can one stenographer command a high salary while the town is overrun with girls who are always advertising for a job? Because busy men are willing to pay for expert work that is always right and nobody wants to pay for bungling, blundering work that is full of mistakes, errors and erasures, and that can never be depended upon for accuracy.

I want to [illegible] how to do things well, little sister. It pays to be on the job, and if you know wherein you fail to make good you've got a long step pointing you to the ways of success. Just correct your faults, and make of your weakness your strength.

Don't say you can't write, or you can't spell, or you can't add up figures, or you can't cook, or you can't sew, because you can if you want to. Any girl with ordinary intelligence and a particle of backbone in her body can make herself an expert in any of these lines if she will give it half the time and trouble and serious thought that she does to the way she [illegible] her hair.

Of course girls are like boys, they succeed best in the occupation for which they have a natural aptitude. In selecting [illegible] and [illegible] subjects doing, but having once made this selection, stick to it and learn to do that thing supremely well.

That's the open sesame to success, little sister. It's just doing things well, and whether it's learning how to write a legible hand, or singing grand opera, it's up to the individual. If you have the determination and the energy, and the courage to work, and work and work until you conquer your difficulty and learn how to do that part of the thing just right, you will succeed, otherwise you will be a failure. It's up to you.

Aged With Waiting

ALGY had promised to take his best girl for a drive, and had been round the various livery stables in the town with the idea of hiring a horse and carriage.

Unfortunately, all the horses were engaged, except one exceedingly shaky, broken-down looking affair, rather than disappoint his girl, Algy hired the animal and drove it round to the residence of his beloved.

He rang the bell and told the servant to tell her ladyship that he was ready for her. The answer came back that she would be down in a minute.

After a full hour and a half the fair lady appeared. She looked at Algy.

"Sir," she cried indignantly, "I refuse to go out with a broken-down horse like this."

"Madam," replied Algy with biting sarcasm, "when this horse first came round to your door she was a prancing young colt!"

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"WILFRED bought a dog the other day," said the Manicure Lady. "It was one of them Boston bulls. The poor boy didn't have no sugar to give his bride except that gift, so he thought he might as well make her a present of that, as long as he got it for nothing from a gent that he knew when he was a kid.

"I don't like the idea of dogs in the city, George. They ain't no good for nothing. What's the use of having them for watch dogs when you ain't got anything in the flat to watch. The only place for a dog is the country anyway, and the more I see of a city, George, the more it seems to me that the country is as good a place for human beings as it is for dogs, and maybe better.

"This dog that Wilfred bought was a kind of funny looking, and little cur, like one of Wilfred's poems. It looked kind of hopeless, I mean. The poor boy thought that his bride would like it, but I knew better. Three days' acquaintance with her taught me, George, that she wasn't in the mood to like anything, and never would be in the mood.

"That's why I felt kind of sorry for poor brother when he asked me to go over to his flat with him while he made the presentation speech. He had a poem all wrote out to say when he gave the mutt to the girl that he had took for his wife, and between you and me, George, the poem was as bad as the dog. This is how it went:——"

"Don't start it, please," said the Head Barber. "The poems that your brother writes gives a man the creeps. Lay off on it and let's talk about the weather. Let's talk about anything—but no poems wrote by your brother."

"But I must tell you this one, George," said the Manicure Lady. "The name of it alone struck me kind of funny—'A Poem to a Pup.' Fancy that, George! I have heard a lot about poems to ladies, and poems to dark eyes and to blue eyes, but that was the first time I ever heard a poem to a pup. Listen, George:

"Poor little pup that shivered,
Poor little pup, with nerves that quivered;
Poor little pup that needs my strong arm's protection,
I hope thou wilt live till after election."

"That is the choosiest poem that I ever heard," declared the Head Barber. "What did the bride do when she heard it?"

"She cried," said the Manicure Lady.

"Well, it won't be the only time she ever cried or ever will cry," said the Head Barber.

Cause to Celebrate

Mrs. Greene, who is head of her house, remarked one morning to her husband:

"In five months from today we shall celebrate our silver wedding."

"Better wait five years longer," said her husband, in quiet desperation, "and then we can celebrate the Thirty Years' War."

Fetching Costumes for Afternoon Wear

The new Fall suits hold over some of the features of Spring, some of them still displaying the half-long, cutaway coat fastened with a single button. The model shown here is of "mastic" cloth, with buttons and loops the only trimming on the skirt.

The smart afternoon frock on the right is of khaki-liberty, with the bodice open to show a linen-net chemisette finely pleated and tied at the neck with a violet ribbon. The frock is of the one-piece variety and is carried out with great simplicity.

THIS had never occurred before. He had given strict orders, backed by his brother's authority, that he was never to be intruded upon when in this place; and though he had sometimes encountered the prying eyes of the curious flashing from behind the trees encircling the hangar, his door had never been approached before, or his privacy encroached upon. He started then, when this low but penetrating sound struck across the turmoil of his thoughts, and cast one look in the direction from which it came, but he did not rise, or even change his position on his workman's stool.

Then it came again, still low but with an insistence which drew his brows together and made his hand fall from the wires he had been unconsciously holding through the mental debate which was absorbing him. Still he made no response, and the knocking continued. Should he ignore it entirely, start up his motor and render himself oblivious to all other sounds? At every other point in his career he would have done this, but an unknown, and as yet unnamed, sense of portent which gave an aspect of farewell to the one quick glance he cast about the well-known spot, he fitted the key in the lock, and stood ready to turn it.

"I ask you again your name and business!" he shouted out in loud command. Tell them or——" He meant to say, "or I do not turn this key." But something withheld the threat. He knew that it would perish in the utterance; that he could not carry it out. He would have to open the door, now, response or no response. "Speak!" was the word with which he finished his demand.

The door remained unopened.

Stepping slowly back, he stared at its unpainted boards for a moment, then he spoke up quietly, almost courteously:

"Enter."

But the command passed unheeded; the latch was not raised; and only the slightest tap was heard.

With a bound he reached forward and pulled the door open. Then a great silence fell upon him and a rigidity as of the grave seized and stiffened his powerful frame.

The man confronting him from the darkness was Sweetwater.

The Man Within and the Man Without

AN INSTANT of silence, during which the two men eyed each other; then, Sweetwater, with an ironical smile directed toward the pistol, lightly remarked:

"Mr. Challoner and other men at the hotel are acquainted with my purpose and await my return. I have come" —— here he cast a glowing look at the huge curtain cutting off the greater portion of the lily-lit interior "——to offer you my services, Mr. Brotherson. I have no other motive for this intrusion than to be of use. I am deeply interested in your invention, to the development of which I have already lent some aid, and can bring to the test you propose a sympathetic help which you could hardly find in any other person living."

The silence which settled down at the completion of these words had a weight which made that of the previous moment seem light and all stirred with sound. The man within had not yet caught his breath; the man without held his, in an anxiety which had little to do with the direction of the weapon, into which he looked. Then an owl hooted far away in the forest, and Orlando, slowly lowering his arm, asked in an oddly constrained tone:

"How long have you been in town?"

The answer cut clean through any lingering hope he may have had.

"Ever since the day your brother was told the story of his great misfortune."

"Ah! still at your old tricks! I thought you had quit that business as unprofitable."

"I don't know. I never expect quick returns. He who holds on for a rise sometimes reaps unlooked-for profits."

The arm and fist of Orlando Brotherson sank to hurl this fellow back into the heart of the midnight woods.

But they remained quiescent and he spoke instead:

"I have buried the business. You will never resuscitate it through me."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Summons

Taking advantage of a momentary cessation of the ceaseless tap tap, he listened. Silence was never profounder than in this forest on that windless night. Earth and air seemed, to his strained ear, emptied of all sound. The clatter of his own steady, unhastened heart-beat was all that broke upon the stillness. He might be alone in the universe for all token of life beyond these walls, or so he was saying to himself, when sharp, quick, sinister, the knock ing recommenced, demanding admission. Insisting upon attention, drawing him against his own will to his feet, and finally, though he made more than one stand against it, to the very door.

"Who's there?" he asked imperiously and with some show of anger.

"No answer, but another quiet knock.

"Speak or go from my door. No one has the right to intrude here. What is your name and business?"

With an outburst of wrath, which made the hangar ring, Orlando lifted his fist to answer this appeal in his own fierce fashion from his own side of the door, but the impulse paused at fulfilment, and he let his arm fall again in a rush of self-hatred which it would have raised its worst enemy, even little Doris, to witness. As it reached his side, the knock came again.

It was too much. With an oath Orlando reached for his key. But before fitting it into the lock, he cast a look behind him. The car was in plain sight filling the central space from floor to roof. A single glance from a stranger's eye, and its principal secret would be a secret no longer. He must not run such a risk. Before he answered this call he must drop the curtain he had rigged up against such emergencies as these. He had but to pull a cord and a veil would fall before his treasure, concealing it as effectually as an Eastern bride is concealed behind her yashmak.

Stepping to the wall he drew that cord, then with an impatient sigh, returned to the door.

Another quiet but insistent knock greeted him.

In no hurry now, but with a vague

Household Hints

Before wearing new kid gloves, if they are laid between the folds of a damp cloth for an hour they will be much easier to put on. The damp causes the kid to become more pliable, so that it will stretch to the required shape without cracking or splitting, and if rubbed with a piece of stale bread every time they are taken off they will never need to be sent to a cleaner's. Gloves treated in this way will last a long time.

Rhubarb can be dried and put by for Winter use. Cut the stalks of well-ripened rhubarb as inch long, place in a cool oven; when all the moisture has evaporated make it thoroughly dry, and then put into paper bags. Securely fasten and hang up the bags. When required, later on, soak in water and cook like fresh rhubarb.

When coloring is required for stews or hashes, let the onions have the outer skin left on, and no burnt sugar or any other coloring matter will be required.

"Drama-Mad" Girls at Radcliffe College Warned by President

The department of dramatics at Radcliffe received a severe jolt when President LeBaron Briggs, in his opening address to the assembled students of Radcliffe, warned the girls to beware of "drama-mad" undergo. The study of dramatic literature, and play-writing which had been carried on lately with so much success by Professor G. P. Baker is said to be severely affected by the president's view on the subject.

"College is a place of hobbies and of special aims," said President Briggs. "Nothing is more natural or praiseworthy than to see a student earnestly pursuing, with enthusiasm, some special line of work. It is equally natural that these enthusiasts should be anxious to convert other girls to their way of thinking.

"But when you meet a girl who is drama-mad; who believes not merely that drama should be written, but is imbued with the firm conviction that she can write it, and that it is her duty to write it, when you meet such an enthusiast, it is as well to fight shy. The detective must be drawn between enthusiasm and fanaticism."

Mr. Munsey's Purchase of the New York Press as Mr. Hearst Views It

PARIS, Sept. 24.—The purchase of the New York Press by Mr. Munsey is a matter upon which the community can be congratulated. Mr. Munsey is one of America's greatest publishers, with the highest ideas of the ethics and obligations of his profession.

He is always honorable in his relations with the public and in his dealings with his fellow publishers. He is always conscientious in his work, always admirable in his purposes and in his methods.

Mr. Munsey comes courageously to express his convictions and to support the cause of Mr. Roosevelt in this campaign. The need and the value of this contribution of Mr. Munsey to full and fair political discussion will be universally recognized by all liberal-minded men.

Mr. Roosevelt has been unreasonably attacked and immeasurably abused by the more partisan press of New York City. Every act of his has been misrepresented, every fact bearing upon him or his party has been distorted to satisfy the revenges or the prejudices of antagonistic editors.

Whatever the citizens may think of Mr. Roosevelt they must feel that he and his party are entitled to truthful newspaper publicity and to just and fair presentation of their views and objects.

My publications, therefore, though committed to the cause of Democracy, have offered their columns freely to Mr. Roosevelt and his advocates merely in the interests of American fair play.

Mr. Munsey will do more. He will devote his newspaper to the support of Mr. Roosevelt with characteristic ability and enthusiasm. The citizens, irrespective of their presidential preferences, will be grateful to Mr. Munsey. They are anxious to see all sides of political questions fully and fairly presented, in order that they may render wise and well-advised judgment for the best interests of the country.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Democrats Have Indorsed a Successful Party Leader

The AMERICAN Never for a Moment Faltered in the Belief That the Democrats Would Not Repudiate a Good Democratic Administration

The Democrats of Massachusetts have rendered their verdict in favor of Governor Foss.

It is a wise verdict. It subserves the best interests of the party and of the State, and it does full justice to Governor Foss.

The AMERICAN never for a moment faltered in the belief that the Democrats would not repudiate a good Democratic administration and a successful Democratic leader.

Mr. Pelletier may now proceed to carry out the important work of his office which he has begun. The vote he received need cause him no shame. The situation, the argument, the men were against him. His conduct of his office during the last two months gave him splendid support and constituted the chief source of his strength. He was entitled to the benefit of the public approval of his recent acts and the AMERICAN did not hesitate to accord him the praise which was his due.

But Mr. Pelletier's difficulty was that he could not be given the reward he sought without doing a great injustice to Governor Foss, whose record in office required his renomination.

This primary election has its lessons, and some of them are important lessons. The Massachusetts Democracy had to deal with questions of great delicacy. They have settled them wisely, patriotically and in a way long to be remembered.

The victors in this contest have no revenges to satisfy. The victors and the vanquished are fellow-Democrats today, facing the common enemy.

What was said in the heat of the hustings is already forgotten. Governor Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald, John W. Cummings, David I. Walsh, Chairman Riley of the State Committee, Chairman Maynard of the City Committee, Martin Lomasney, Mayors Barry of Cambridge, Higgins of Fall River, O'Connell of Worcester, and the other Democratic leaders who bore the heat of the day for Governor Foss feel no resentment against the supporters of Mr. Pelletier.

In fact, it is as much the duty of those who won to welcome Mr. Pelletier's friends back into the ranks under Governor Foss' leadership as it is the duty of those who lost to come back.

The spirit which Governor Foss and his friends should show, and will show, was nobly expressed by Lincoln at Gettysburg when he urged that there be "malice toward none and charity for all."

The AMERICAN congratulates Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor never made a more gallant, spirited and chivalrous fight than he made in this contest to save the party from a great mistake. Those who reckoned that his influence in the party was waning must now make new observations.

Let us close up ranks and hold the State for progress against the coming assault of the Republican reactionaries.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

OUR RIGHTS IN PANAMA.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I cannot too highly commend the patriotic and common sense position taken by the AMERICAN in the matter of American rights in the Panama Canal. The chorus of denunciation that is being joined in by a group of newspapers that generally take their cues from foreign influences is properly characterized by the AMERICAN.

Stripped of all pettifogging, the proposition is that in making good to our ships the amount of tolls required our government is in honor bound not to do a thing which any other nation may freely and honorably do.

There is no treaty requirement that anyone may truthfully assert debars any other nation from reimbursing its ships for the tolls they must pay in passing through our Panama Canal. But, say these peckaniffian protestants, it would be a violation of our plighted word, of our national honor, for the United States to exercise a right unquestionably possessed by every other nation.

What tommy rot! What an absurdity! As if the American people would tolerate, for a moment, the suggestion that this nation is fettered by treaty obligations placing the United States in an inferior position as to RIGHTS, in a canal constructed with the money of the American people, a canal that is owned by the United States, and that will be regulated and governed by the United States.

MR. HEARST'S TARIFF VIEWS ABLE AND PATRIOTIC

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Mr. Hearst's article in an Eastern paper on the tariff is able and patriotic. Americans of all classes and parties should stand together on such a platform as Mr. Hearst has outlined.

No one who recalls the calamity that befell this country when a distinguished school man of the South fathered a bill for the reduction of tariff under the Cleveland administration will fail to thank Mr. Hearst for his timely utterances.

If a considerable number of citizens would get together on the matter, as set forth in this timely pronouncement, it would do more than anything else to encourage the American business man to proceed with his industrial enterprises.

God has given us great harvests; now let us free ourselves from the tyranny of the vote-gatherers of all parties long enough to secure our legitimate national prosperity.

That Loud Noise at Your Gate Is Opportunity

Some Say He Comes But Once. The Late Senator Ingalls, a Massachusetts Man, Believed This Strongly, as Was Shown When He Left Haverhill for Kansas. Ingalls Wrote a GREAT SONNET About "Opportunity," Timely Today Because of a Certain Ten Thousand Dollars That MAY BE YOURS

There is an old saying that opportunity comes ONCE to EVERY man.

Many old writers, and some of our MODERN WISE MEN, hold that opportunity comes BUT once.

We see so many examples about us of strong men who missed one opportunity, and perhaps MORE than one, only to grasp another and rise to fame or riches or power with it, that we NEED NOT TAKE THIS OLD SAYING FOR GOSPEL.

At the same time no sensible person will KNOWINGLY waste an opportunity. Even the Bible, as you may know, admonishes us to "OBSERVE THE OPPORTUNITY."

A great opportunity lies before YOU, and before every other reader of this newspaper, in the $40,000 voting contest of the Sunday AMERICAN. This great contest is now open. From now on the Sunday AMERICAN will print a coupon worth TWENTY-FIVE and the daily paper a coupon good for FIVE votes. At the end of TWENTY WEEKS, 1501 prizes, valued at forty thousand dollars will be distributed among the leading contestants.

The first prize will be TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN CASH.

There will be FIVE DISTRICT PRIZES OF ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS EACH.

YOU know what you can do with ten thousand dollars.

Ten thousand dollars means a home, a college education for the children, a COMPETENCE.

Ten thousand dollars might be the MAKING of you; might set you up in business.

So is opportunity knocking at YOUR door, today.

The belief that opportunity knocks but once, and that we must be on the alert for him, is probably best expressed in what has been called the BEST SONNET EVER WRITTEN BY AN AMERICAN, John J. Ingalls' "Opportunity."

Ingalls was a United States Senator from Kansas. He died about a dozen years ago. Most people who remember him, and who recall that he was called "Kansas incarnate," would tell you offhand that Ingalls was a native Kansan, that he MUST have been.

The FACT is that Ingalls was a NATIVE OF MASSACHUSETTS, a lineal descendant of the Puritan Ingalls who first settled Lynn, a graduate of Williams College and for a short time a member of the bar of Essex County. This is the celebrated Ingalls sonnet on "Opportunity," timely just now in connection with the Sunday AMERICAN'S offer of $10,000 and OTHER prizes:

Master of human destinies am I!
Fame, love and fortune on my footsteps wait;
Cities and fields I walk; I penetrate
Deserts and seas remote, and passing by
Hovel and mart and palace, soon or late
I knock unbidden once at every gate!
If sleeping, wake; if feasting, rise before
I turn away. It is the hour of fate,
And they who follow me reach every state
Mortals desire, and conquer every foe
Save death, but those who doubt, or hesitate,
Condemned to failure, penury and woe,
Seek me in vain and uselessly implore,
I answer not, and I return no more.

Ingalls was a REMARKABLE man. He undoubtedly felt what he wrote, which is the secret of ALL WRITING THAT AFFECTS US STRONGLY. He left the city of Haverhill, soon after he had opened a law office there, because he had been attracted by a lithograph advertising a new town in Kansas. Ingalls headed straight for that town. He remained there until the town was blown away in a cyclone. Then he removed to Atchison, where he made his home for thirty years.

The great sonnet of this unique Kansan may stir you to the opportunity that lies before YOU, in the Sunday AMERICAN'S voting contest. Read the sonnet over again and you will have derived SOME benefit out of this contest, whether you decide to compete or not. You MAY decide to read more about INGALLS. That may be of benefit, also. College students may be interested in the story of how he came to leave Williamstown on bad terms with the faculty, and how, many years afterwards, he was called back to deliver the oration and was made a Doctor of Laws.

In any event, study the opportunity that lies before YOU, today, in the Sunday AMERICAN'S voting contest. Surely, if there is ten thousand dollars here FOR YOU you will not pass it by LIGHTLY.

Pliny the Elder held that "opportunities lost can never be regained," while it was a maxim of Publius Syrus that "while we stop to think we often miss our opportunity."

John J. Ingalls and Pliny the Elder and Publius Syrus may have been wrong.

If they were RIGHT, Opportunity is at YOUR gate, in the Sunday AMERICAN contest, and WILL RETURN NO MORE.

From a Gentleman Inside

By DAMON RUNYON

THEY'S a banker that's a trusty workin' on the warden's books;
I kin see him from the rock pile where I'm sittin'.
An' on his case I'm basin' this advice to feller crooks:—
You'd better git a plenty while yer gittin'.
Now, this guy wrecked a county an' he copped his neighbors' dough;
He got six hundred thousand, which is some change, as you know;
They give him one to two years, an' the softest job here—Oh,
It pays to get a plenty while yer gittin'.

Wit' me little flask o' nitro an' me bar o' laundry soap
I blew a safe, an' then, as was befittin',
I took me ten years sittin', glad I didn't git the rope—
But the next time! Oh, a plenty while I'm gittin'!
For this guy tore off half a State an' shook the other half;
He robbed his friends an' neighbors an' he handed both the laugh—
But you oughta heard him holler at that one to two year gaff—
You'd better git a plenty while yer gittin'.

An' so he's here a trusty, while I wear a ball an' chain—
(They say he beat most every attorney written.)
He's got a fortune planted an' all I've got's a pain;
You'd better git a plenty while yer gittin'!
He cost the State a million bucks before they put him here;
He had ten lawyers for his trial, w'ich lasted most a year;
An' the judge who had to sentence him pronounced it wit' a tear—
It pays to git a plenty while yer gittin'!
